HAVE YOU A POCKET IN YOUR SKIRT? THEY ARE ALL THE GO NOW

And now that we have pockets,
(In skirts, you'll kindly note),
You're wondering how we'll use 'em—
Just to hold a woman's vote.
—Suffragette Slogan.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—A stunning girl entered the quarters of the Political Equality Association, No. 15 East Forty-first street, yesterday, and was looking over some equal suffrage bulletins, when a fair friend aproached her and whispered:

"Will you lend me your powder puff? I've forgotten mine."

"Certainly," responded the stunning girl.

"But you have no handbag with you," said the other.

"Oh, that makes no difference," was the smiling reply of the S. G. Then she began fumbling at her right side.

"Well," exclaimed the astonished girl who had asked for the powder puff. "Mercy me! Why, you — you — you have 'em!"

"Have what?" inquired the S. G.

"Pockets in your skirt!"

"Oh, of course," smiled the S. G. "They are getting to be quite the rage. Haven't you seen them before?"

And here she drew a vanity box from the depth of the pocket. Then she explained:

"Of course I have 'em. They are delicious, and are such a comfort. No more handbags for me. Wsy, pockets are the dearest things in the world.

"I am surprised women never thought of using them before. My little brother gave me the first cue about using them. When I saw that his pockets held marbles, tops, chalk, and even snowballs in Winter, I argued that pockets for skirts would be quite useful. So I had them put in this skirt.

"If the day is cold I walk along with my hands in my pockets. In them I can carry money, notebooks, visiting cards, everything a woman possibly could make use of. And some day soon I expect to carry my vote in that pocket when I go to the polls."

"But you don't get your ballot until you reach the polls," protested her friend.

"Well, I feel so enthusiastic over votes for women that I'll probably vote early and often when I get the ballot," said the S. G. "Don't you think my pockets are lovely?"

The one sure, quick way is to read the "Want Ad" pages of the American seven days a week. Casual reading is beneficial of course, but systematic reading is better. Then you will not miss the particular thing you want.

The American is the "Want Ad" directory of Boston, and these "Want Ads," sent in by the people, embrace hundreds of topics and cover a multitude of hopes and ambitions.

It would require many lines of type to enumerate the different classifications. But turn to these "Want Ad" pages and see for yourself—today—any day. Then you will more fully understand the extensive service they render.

HOLD MAN FOR DEATH OF GIRL

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 10.—The murder of Annie Walsh, which the police first called an "open and shut case" against Charles Matrony, captain of the barge upon which her decapitated body was found, was today clouded in mystery by further investigation. Although Matrony has been formally charged with murder and his case continued till January 21, the police are not at all confident of his guilt.

The case in its grim aspect rivals any dark mystery at sea. Louis Therrien, who notified the police of the murder, has been held as a witness, and a seaching investigation is in progress. The police are hunting a woman who was with him, Captain Matrong, and the murdered girl before the crime was committed.

The fundamental facts in the case are these: That Annie Walsh's decapitated and mutilated body was found in a bunk in the coal barge Snipe; that Captain Matrony was found in a corner of the cabin with a rope around his neck; that the police were notified of the murder by Louis Therrien, and that a search revealed a short handled axe and a knife, both blood stained, which, the police believe, were used in cutting up the body.

POLICE PUZZLED.

But further investigation has revealed circumstances and raised questions which the police are at a loss to explain.

Who put the rope around Matrony's neck—himself, or another?

What caused the marks of a terrible fight in the cabin, which the police find on the cabin floor?

Why should Matrony have killed the woman—if he did?

Further than these there are contradictions in the story told by Louis Therrien—according to the police.

First he said that he went to the barge thinking to find work; that he looked in the lighted window of the cabin; that he saw the woman's mutilated body, but saw nothing of the captain, and that thereupon he notified the police.

MANY CONTRADICTIONS.

Then the police found that Therrien, Matrony, Miss Walsh and another woman, for whom they are now esarching, were together in a waterfront saloon at 11 o'clock last night. "How about this?" they asked Therrien.

Upon this, according to the officials, he told a new story.

He said he was in the saloon with

RENEW PLEA FOR HUB BANK

The Boston regional bank hearings closed at 11 o'clock today, with the two Cabinet members who have been conducting them evidently impressed by the arguments presented by local bankers and business men to secure one of the regional banks for this city.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who, with Secretary of Agriculture Houston, has presided at the hearings, said at the close that he was pleased with the technical knowledge of banking and the currency bill displayed by Boston bankers.

Secretary McAdoo could not commit himself definitely as to the final decision in the case, saying:

"It is impossible for either Secretary Houston or myself to express any opinion as to our final decision.

"We must hear from the country as a whole and our task is already a difficult one. To commit ourselves now would vitiate our work."

The secretaries, with their large staff of clerks, shorthand men and other assistants, left at 1 o'clock for Washington. Monday they will begin sittings, to hear arguments of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Richmond and Wheeling bankers for a regional bank in their respective cities.

A special car was attached to the 1 o'clock express to accommodate the party, their mass of documents and other baggage.

BANKERS UNITED.

Congressman Andrew J. Peters of this city sat with the two secretaries during the latter part of today's session at the Chamber of Commerce Building. At the close he expressed to the AMERICAN his gratification at the united front presented by Boston and New England financiers and business men for a regional bank for Boston, with not a single voice heard in opposition.

"The only difference of opinion," said Congressman Peters, "was whether Southwestern Connecticut should be included in the Boston regional bank and the preponderance of opinion was in favor of it.

"It is impossible to carry out the intent of the banking act without establishing a regional bank in Boston. I do not see how the country can be divided into eight to twelve regions, under the purposes of the act, without making New England one of them. It is impossible to contemplate a division of the country

AIR ROW AT BRIBE HEARING

The police bribery scandal growing out of the Cedarcrest Club raid in Braintree was aired in detail for the first time in the hearing of charges against Policeman John D. Walsh of Weymouth before the town selectmen at East Weymouth.

Walsh is accused on five counts as follows:

Being away from his post of duty on the nights of November 14 and 15 last.

Being under the influence of liquor.

Being at the Cedarcedest Club on the nights of November 13 and 14 and demanding money.

Being at the Cedarcrest Club in violation of the police rules.

Being in a fight with Officer Dugan.

DENIES COMPLICITY.

The charges are the outcome of the testimony of Mrs. D. Grace Reynolds in the Quincy Court, that Officer Dugan demanded that she "come across" with money, saying that he would "fix it up." Walsh on the stand today denied that he had any part in Dugan's alleged demand for money.

Dr. Norbert Mullen, a Weymouth physician, declared on the stand that after the fight he noticed Dugan's wrist was broken. He said he found Walsh severely battered. He thought a dozen blows had been struck at Walsh.

Walsh testified that he has been a Weymouth policeman for fifteen years and that the liquor charges against him were untrue. This is his story of his fight with Dugan:

"After our visit to the Cedarcrest Club, we came back to Weymouth. Dugan and I went upstairs in the Commonwealth Club. Dugan began complaining of how Chief Hunt of the Braintree police had called him down for being at Cedarcrest. He said he was afraid he'd lose his job.

"Dugan got rather cranky. I went out first. Dugan was still complaining. This led me to say to him:

"'You've got one drink too many on tonight, Henry.'

WAS KNOCKED DOWN.

"He knocked me down with his fist. I didn't strike him and I don't know if I gave him any cause, unless it was my remark about the drink.

"When we went to Cedarcrest Dugan drank out of a bottle. He offered me a drink but I refused it. I heard Mrs. Reynolds after they had talked about the club register of guests, say to him:

"'I'd just as son close this place as not.'

"I didn't talk to Mrs. Reynolds. I did not ask her for any money. I was not drunk."

NOTED TALKERS OUT FOR KENNY

The Thomas J. Kenny campaign for Mayor, which has been running along for two days like wildfire, will reach almost to its height tonight in a great demonstration in Tremont Temple.

Joseph A. Denison, one of the most popular Democrats in all the city, will be the presiding officer.

All three of the leading political parties will be represented among the speakers. Former Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham will urge Republicans to rally to the defence of the city and its good name and cast their votes for Thomas J. Kenny.

The Progressive element in the community will be represented by James B. Connolly, famous writer of short stories. Mr. Connolly ran for Congress last Fall in the Curley district with such success that Mr. Curley is today a "minority" Congressman, having failed to get a majority of all the votes.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, Major Henry Lee Higginson, former Senator Richard S. Teeling and Hon. John P. Leahy are also on the list of speakers.

INSANITY BOARD IS UNANIMOUS IN ITS VERDICT ON SLAYER

Harry K. Thaw's fate on the question of freedom on bail is settled today. A favorable decision is indicated.

The Thaw Sanity Commission went into final session at 10 o'clock at the home of Dr. Morton H. Prince at No. 458 Beacon street.

BOARD'S DECISION IS UNANIMOUS.

General Frank S. Streeter of Concord, N. H., chairman of the commission and its spokesman, said that the commission had unanimously agreed that its decision would be reached today and filed at Concord tonight.

The finality with which General Streeter spoke showed that the members of the commission have their minds pretty well made up now, so that they know they will clear up the case today.

From Concord persistent reports have come that the attitude of the commission is inclined toward recommending bail for the celebrated prisoner. Testimony of witnesses before the commission has been all that way. Jerome, Thaw's personal "Nemesis," is sulking in New York more or less like Achilles in his tent. He refused to come before the commission.

REPORT TO U. S. COURT.

From these reasons it is believed that the commission will recommend Thaw for bail in its finding to Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court in New Hampshire.

Judge Aldrich appointed this commission and, according to general belief, will follow its recommendations in regard to bail.

With General Streeter and Dr. Dr. Prince on the commission are Dr. Charles P. Bancroft of Concord, N. H., and Dr. George A. Blumer of Providence, R. I.

Dr. Prince was stricken ill while the commission was still sitting at Concord. So, for the final conference today, the other three members came to Boston to accommodate Dr. Prince.

General Streeter and Drs. Bancroft and Blumer went to Dr. Prince's house and the final conference began at 10:30 o'clock behind closed doors.

General Streeter, who came down from Concord with his colleagues last night, put up at the Union Club. Dr. Bancroft went to the Copley-Plaza. Dr. Blumer went to his Providence home.

General Streeter was up in such sprightly season at the Union Club today that he had eaten breakfast, gone for a brisk walk and returned to the club before the average Boston business man had left home for down town.

General Streeter said:

MAKE DECISION TODAY.

"Our finding on the Thaw case will be filed with the clerk of the United States District Court at Concord between 10 and 11 o'clock tonight. This is absolute.

"The commission did not sit last night on account of Dr. Prince's illness. But we received notice from him that he could sit with us today.

"We have unanimously agreed that our decision will be reached today. In the meantime we have agreed that nothing shall be given out for publication until our decision is filed with the clerk of the court."

At the Copley-Plaza Dr. Bancroft said the decision would be attained today.

MYSTERY IN HEADLESS GIRL ON COAL BARGE

Matrony, the murdered Walsh girl and another woman. When the party started for the barge, this other woman refused to go, saying: "Dry land is good enough for me."

He said that upon arriving at the barge he went into the west cabin. He said he was very drunk, but that he locked his door to prevent any one robbing him.

Half an hour later, he declared, he awoke, and called out to Captain Matrony. Receiving no reply, he opened his cabin door to investigate—saw the dead body in the bunk in the east cabin, and bolted from the barge.

But he did not go direct to the police, he admits. Instead he went to his home at No. 28 Maxfield street told his daughter the story—and they both came to the police station.

Deputy Chief Parker, who is in charge of the case, pointed out contradictions in the man's story. He declared a man "dead drunk" would not have awakened half an hour after he went to sleep.

He believes it possible that the two men quarreled after reaching the tug. This would account for the marks of a struggle upon the cabin floor. Captain Matrony was helplessly intoxicated, and declares his mind is a blank. He will be examined by physicians to see if there is any mark upon him of a struggle and to determine if possible whether an attempt had been made to strangle him.

TO QUESTION DAUGHTER.

When the police arrived, he was groaning and almost unconscious in a corner of the cabin, while the woman's mutilated body lay in the bunk.

Therrien's daughter will probably be interrogated as to what her father told her when he came home, and what he did there before he went with her to the police.

Miss Walsh, the victim, was an orphan, and without relatives so far as known. She lived at No. 335 Purchase street.

After arresting Matrony the police found a short-handled ax, stained with blood, and a knife which had evidently been used in cutting up the body. The head had been removed, the nose slashed, the right leg cut off at the thigh and the left leg nearly severed at the knee. One of the woman's ears was half cut from her head.

Screams, supposed to have been those of the victim, were heard by Patrolman Walter Mullin as he was patrolling his beat on the waterfront shortly before midnight. He could not then ascertain from what direction they came.

Captain Matrony came here in the Snipe with a cargo of coal from Reading, N. J., last Monday. He sailed from Reading just after Christmas. When arrested he had $10.28 in his pockets. He stated, the police say, that he was the son of Anton Matrony of No. 55 Richmond street, Bristol, R. I., and that he had two brothers and three sisters there.

Ready to Swim, but Hunt Moths? Never!

FOSTER WILL FIGHT SLAVE ACT; BRADLEY GIRL BREAKS DOWN

Deliah F. Bradley, the sixteen-year-old girl who eloped with Joel M. Foster.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 10.—A battle backed by wealth is to be made by Joel H. Foster, head of the International Poultry Farms Company, of Brown's Mills, N. J., in defence of his elopement with sixteen-year-old Delilah Bradley of Pemberton.

While his neighbors in the little New Jersey town where his wife and daughter lives were threatening to tar and feather him if he ever dared return, he calmly defied the United States government to put him in prison under the Mann "White Slave" act.

The girl—delicately pretty, with a childish charm, broke down when she heard the message that her little gray-haired mother up in Pemberton wanted her to come home.

"I love them. Would they let me go home?" she said over her mother's message. Darkness had brought dawn to the little, dazzled mind. She had found out what love was.

MAY STAND BY FOSTER.

Still, she may stand by Foster in his flight. And Foster will fight his fight on his own fortune.

His wife is in his father's home. His daughter by a former marriage is also there. The father, T. J. Foster, known throughout the country as a financier of power, has made no statement concerning his son's case.

He sent for two of the most prominent attorneys in Mobile yesterday and ordered them to call two more from Philadelphia. He says the Mann "white slave" act concerns only cases of "commercialized vice."

Local officials of the federal government do not take that view. It is a test case that will arouse the interest of the entire country.

Foster says his home life was unhappy after his second marriage seven years ago. He declares he has arranged to bring an action for divorce, and that when he has obtained a decree he will establish himself in Mobile and conduct a sanitarium.

Released on $2,000 bail, he went to the Battle House, a modest establishment compared with the Cawthorn, where he had lavished his wealth.

ASKED TO LEAVE HOTEL.

Little Miss Bradley took a room in an obscure boarding house. She had been asked to leave the Cawthorn. The request was based, technically, on the report that she had blown a tin horn in the faces of guests on New Year's eve.

"Mr. Foster is good—I know he is good," she said today. "I believe he will marry me—if I hadn't believed it, I would never have gone away with him.

"We left New Jersey December 18 and went first to New Orleans. We were very happy. We stopped at the best places, and Mr. Foster was always kind. He told me he was unhappy at home. I thought I made him happy—and I thought I did right. I don't know."

She is under $500 bail as a witness. She will probably be the chief figure in one of the most remarkable cases ever drawn under the new statute.

'STRIKE AD' LAW IS VALID, SAYS HIGHEST COURT

The Supreme Judicial Court upholds the "strike ad." law. It decided today that the statute is constitutional which requires an adviser for help, where a strike is on, to state in his advertisement that there is a strike.

Walter M. Libbey, a Lynn shoe manufacturer, and J. F. Crane, a West Roxbury painter, questioned the constitutionality of the law.

In upholding the statute he Supreme bench ruled today:

> The statute is not arbitrary and has a reasonable relation to the public interests. It does not destroy equality before the law, nor create special privileges. It cannot be pronounced unreasonable on the part of the Legislature to take measures to shield those who labor from being induced in ignorance to seek employment in a place where are the features prevailing in a strike. The statute seems to have a reasonable relation to the accomplishment of the end and the end itself is one within the scope of legislation.

CALLS STATE HEALTH BOARD INCOMPETENT

The State Board of Health and a number of local boards of health are declared to be "appallingly" incompetent and weak, in reports filed at the State House by the Special House Committee which has been investigating the tuberculosis situation in the State. The committee finds the "White Plague" to be a disease affecting 40,000 people in Massachusetts.

Representative Benjamin F. Haines of Medford, in a minority report, recommends the abolition of the present State Board of Health and the organization of a new board.

Among the important recommendations made by the committee are:

A central authority to supervise the control of tuberculosis, in the form of a "Department of Diseases Dangerous to the Public Health," to be under the management of the State Board of Health.

Extend authority of State Board to examine all hospitals, asylums, sanitariums, homes, prisons and hospitals.

Dorr Prefers Death to Life in Prison

"I had rather die in the electric chair than spend the rest of my days in prison," today declared William A. Dorr, the slayer of George E. Marsh, the wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, when he heard the Supreme Court overruled his bill of exceptions in his fight for a new trial.

Dorr, who is now in the Salem jail, will shortly be brought into the Salem Court to hear the sentence of death. This may be pronounced by Judge Quinn, who presided at his trial for his life.

Air Splint New Cure for Tuberculosis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—A new method of treating tuberculosis is being investigated by the Public Health Service. It is known as artificial or induced pneumo-thorax. Air is pumped into the patient's pleural cavity every day or two to maintain pressure, and the results watched by means of X-rays to ascertain the extent to which the diseased lung is compressed. The lung, figuratively, is put into an "air splint."

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Keeps your liver and bowels active and you feel bully for months.

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Queen of Bulgaria Asks American to Open Relief Fund for Sufferers

QUEEN ELEONORA.

To the Editor of the Boston American: Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 10.

The Queen will be very grateful to the Hearst newspapers if they will kindly open a relief fund.

ELEONORA, Queen of Bulgaria.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Daneff M. Madejaroff, Bulgarian minister to London, said to the AMERICAN correspondent today:

"News that the Queen has requested the AMERICAN to open a relief fund for sufferers in Bulgaria gives me heartfelt joy."

QUEEN ASKS THE AMERICAN TO HELP BULGARS

LONDON, Jan. 10.—M. Madejaroff, Bulgarian minister to England, on learning today that Queen Eleonora of Burgaria had cabled to the Boston AMERICAN asking it to open a relief fund, said:

"I can assure you it is an almost unprecedented act on the part of our royal family to communicate directly with a newspaper.

"An expression of my opinion is entirely superfluous, but I should like to add my earnest hope that the AMERICAN will open a fund at once for these poor refugees. It is a question of dire urgency.

"These people, fleeing to us from all parts of the country, are in extreme need, and unless outside help is forthcoming enormous numbers cannot survive the hard months of Winter.

"As an act of humanitarianism I ask the AMERICAN to open a fund, and I appeal to the people of the United States to support it quickly and whole-heartedly."

BULGARIA HELPLESS.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The Bulgarian legation here frankly admits the inability of Bulgaria to provide for the hundreds of thousands of starving Bulgarians. A statement emanating from an official source in Sofia, depicts the country as on the verge of bankruptcy. Unless the government is able to conclude immediately a loan of $100,000,000 Bulgaria's situation will become desperate.

King Ferdinand, realizing the extreme gravity of the situation, is about to undertake, incognito, a tour of the European capitals, with the object of raising money to save the country from ruin. Even if he is successful $100,000,000 will serve only to meet the immediate treasury needs. It will bring no succor to the hordes of destitute men and women slowly dying of starvation.

CONDITION PITIABLE.

The Charge d'Affaires of the legation in Paris told the AMERICAN correspondent that the black financial outlook utterly precluded caring for the penniless families whose bread winners were either slain or maimed in the war for the Cross against the Crescent.

"The number of destitute cases of this character is at least 50,000," he added. "The refugees who are unwilling to live under Servian rule in Macedonia, and have drifted into Bulgarian territory number 100,000, perhaps even more. Their condition is truly pitiable.

"Not only are they obliged to subsist on scraps of food which they pick up in the streets and on the vegetation of the country, but they are entirely without protection against the bitterly cold weather of this Winter.

"If we could effect a loan we might do something for the poor wretches, but at present we are totally unable to alleviate their distress.

CRYING FOR BREAD.

"It would be a really generous work if such a widely circulated newspaper as the AMERICAN took up their case and organized a well equipped relief mission. It is heartrending to see these gallant soldiers and their families, who a couple of years ago were prosperous peasants, now crying for bread."

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well - Known Politician, Nearly Bald, Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not known him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home." —Adv.

SPEAKER'S DAUGHTER IS LOVED BY CAPITAL UNFORTUNATE ONES

Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of the Speaker of the National House, who did not give up her mission work even on day she was presented to society

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Ask any derelict you meet on Washington's streets who is the finest young lady in the land and the chances are he will say: "Miss Genevieve Clark."

The fair daughter of the Speaker of the House, who was a debutante only New Year's Day, is loved by the unfortunates of the city for her practical work in their behalf and for her natural girlish sympathy for the "down and out."

At the Gospel Mission they are still telling how Miss Clark took the pains to come there on the very morning of the day of her debut and preside at a linen shower for the benefit of the mission. Nobody expected that the Speaker's daughter or any other girl with normal interest in social affairs would undertake any mission work on the day of her entrance into society, because the latter event is such an overwhelmingly important one to the average maid that her head hasn't room for any other items.

ARRESTED FOR BLACKMAILING MISS MACVANE

TARANTO, Italy, Jan. 10.—The police have arrested the man who tried to blackmail Dorothy Macvane, the Cambridge, Mass., opera singer; and they say they have conclusive evidence against him.

He is Innocente Cicala, a Socialist newspaper man. His attempt at blackmail first became known when Miss Edith Macvane, Dorothy's novelist sister, wrote home:

"Dorothy was much distressed by a visit from a blackmailing journalist, who had shown her an article full of foul and scandalous assertions, which he threatened to publish all over Italy unless she at once paid him a handsome sum in cash. In hopes that she may escape paying blackmail, I yesterday wired her all the money we had here in the bank."

Cicala originally demanded $2,000 from Miss Macvane. But a few days ago he wrote her begging her to desist from prosecuting him and imploring her pity, if not for him, for his children.

Miss Macvane had never prosecuted him, and would willingly have stopped any action against him; but, according to the Italian law, the crime of which he was accused was a matter solely within the province of the public prosecutor.

Cicala was immediately interrogated, and denied any responsibility for the blackmailing of Miss Macvane, but a search made in his home revealed the existence of papers proving his complicity, and also affording proof that he had blackmailed a priest whom he attacked in a local Socialist paper edited by him.

MINDS DIFFER ON TOO MUCH TANG IN TANGO

"Is there too much tang in tango?" No question so absorbs the attention of the world today. Beside it Mexico is a side issue, the currency bill fossilizes, the low cost of New Haven stock of no importance. Every edition of the newspapers brings some new advocate for or against.

To the question, here are some of the answers:

NO	YES
731 English peeresses and bishops	21 English peeresses and bishops
Jean Richepin of Paris	Cardinal Amette of Paris
Andrew de Fouquieres	Dr. Hugh Cabot
Emperor Francis Joseph	Queen Mary of England
King Alfonso	The German Kaiser
Duchess of Rutland	Duchess of Devonshire
Rodin, the sculptor	Maeterlinck, the poet
Shaw, the playwright	The Czar of Russia
The Russian nobility	The Lynn school authorities
The King of Italy	Mayor Munroe of Melrose

And many others.

Cardinal Leon Adolphe Amette, Archbishop of Paris, condemns it as "indecent and offensive to morals." He "reminds the women that they should always observe the rules of Christian modesty."

Jean Richepin of the French Academy, who has traced the tango's origin from religious dances of ancient Egypt and Greece, replies:

"St. John Chrysostom in his time did not condemn, but approved, dances just as suggestive as the tango."

Andre de Fouqieres says the tango is all right. Mayor Munroe of Melrose says he won't allow it. Mayor Murphy of Lowell says ditto. King Alfonso of Spain, it is said, approves of the music. The Kaiser says his officers mustn't dance it or they will be corrupted. The Emperor Francis Joseph finds it "very charming," while the Duchess of Devonshire says it is the "dance of moral death," and Dr. Hugh Cabot of Boston says it is "an unblushing attempt at what few would put into words."

Gamma Delta girls at Boston University danced it last night, but the Czar has forbidden it. Grand Dukes and Grand Duchesses find it delightful, but Maurice Maeterlinck says it is "ungraceful and rather silly."

The Boston police at their annual ball danced a few samples, and Rodin, the sculptor, says it is artistic, but Queen Mary of England has prohibited it. Bernard Shaw and seven hundred and thirty-one peeresses and bishops voted it "so modest it bored us to tears," but twenty-one others who saw the same dances thought them "horrid."

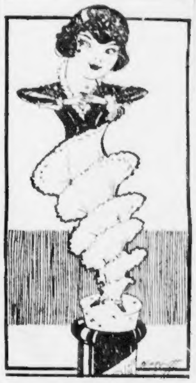
Put On Your Corkscrew Skirt and Waltz Down the Street, a la Paris



THIS IS IT!

The class in Paris fashions will please come to order!

What is this?

It is a corkscrew skirt.

This shrinking and retiring garment received its alias because the would-be wearer has to insert herself in it like a corkscrew going into a quart of something, and then wind herself around and around until she and the skirt are one and inseparable.

To extract the wearer from the skirt, reverse the foregoing process. With a little care and patience serious or fatal injury to the lady may be avoided. Shoehorns are given away free to each stout purchaser of the skirt.

The corkscrew skirt has not caused any runaways on the streets of Boston as yet, because it has not appeared here. In Paris, however, there is such an epidemic of it that taxicab chauffeurs wear blinders over their eyes to avoid accident.

No corkscrew skirt is complete unless its occupant is swathed in a few hundred yards of valenciennes, chambray, mosquito netting or some other rare old lace. The inventor of this part of the scenery has not been found, but the police are still looking for him. As a dust collector it is warranted to put the carpet sweeper and the vacuum cleaner out of business.

CABOT SCORES WOMEN'S DRESS AS IMMORAL

Dr. Hugh Cabot gives women of Greater Boston something to think about in his lecture to the Women's Municipal League in which he said that present styles make for immorality. Among the thoughts Dr. Cabot gave his smartly gowned audience were these:

"Woman's dress has one object clearly in view. I do not think the average woman would wear our Paris styles if she realized their meaning.

"There is no reason why all women should express themselves through gowns originally devised by three or four Frenchmen for the benefit of their pocketbooks.

"Women must co-operate, not tempt, if men are to reform.

"A fundamental alteration in the intent and purpose of women's dress must precede any fundamental alteration in morality.

"French designers go as far as they dare in the face of public opinion. It is public opinion that will alter the styles."

Dr. Cabot also put a new definition on the tango, thus:

"The tango is an unblushing attempt at what few would put into words. It should be ostracized."

TELEPHONE BANDS FORM TO AID CHURCH DAY

There are 150,000 persons now working in behalf of the Boston Go-to-Church Day for Sunday, February 8.

GO-TO-CHURCH BUTTON

If you can't write letters or mail cards to the persons in your neighborhood, you are urged to call them up by telephone. To join the telephone band, all you have to do is to call up ten persons every day and tell them about Go-to-Church Day and get them to tell someone else.

Prayers were said at meetings last evening in all the Boston churches for the success of the movement.

William H. Brigham of the Second Congregational Church, Codman square, one of the enthusiastic leaders in his neighborhood, said:

"This is one of the greatest movements of its kind that has come to Boston. Let the laymen get into touch with it. It is bound to awaken many indifferent persons.

"When the churches are better understood they will be better attended. There is no question about this. This Go-to-Church Day is an effort to get people thinking right about them. If you want to know them, get into the spirit of their work. Get others to feel the same way.

"Then you make Go-to-Church Day valuable to every community."

So enthusiastic are the members of the First Free Baptist Church of Roxbury in the Go-to-Church Day movement that they are determined to bring the aged and infirm in autos or carriages to church on Go-to-Church Sunday.

The Hayes Bible class of the church has appointed a committee to help the pastor, the Rev. Horace B. Hayes, in his effort to have everybody at church February 8. Edmund Weber is president of the class. The committee is: Frank Turner, George Townsend, Edwin G. Tyler, John Richardson and Russell Smith.

The committee has requested persons having carriages or automobiles to lend them for use on Go-to-Church Sunday.

Julia Culp Pleases All at Jordan Hall

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Julia Culp, the Dutch mezzo soprano, drew a capacity audience in Jordan Hall yesterday, which listened entranced to a beautiful program divinely sung. Mme. Culp last year demonstrated her claim to be one of the foremost lieder singers. Her voice is of superfine quality, flexible and of good volume. She sings with an artistry that is truly wonderful.

At the Boston Opera last night "Jewels of the Madonna" was sung, with Marcoux in his familiar role of Raefaelo. Like all his characterizations, this role is distinguished in his hands. Edvina was never in better voice nor spirits, Fontana sang splendidly and the remainder of the long cast acquitted themselves well.

CASSIDY TELLS PERILS IN USE OF DRUG HEROIN

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Heroin, a derivative of morphine, the opium alkaloid known in chemical parlance as diacetyl morphine, found frequently in a number of proprietary drugs, is having its bad influence, according to information sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture. There has been a sudden and very significant increase in the use of this habit-forming drug. Much of it is sold in Boston. The sales have greatly increased, particularly in states which have rigid laws preventing the indiscriminate sale of morphine and cocaine.

Investigation of the subject establishes the fact that many drug victims, who formerly used morphine and cocaine and who under the new laws find it difficult to obtain these substances, have begun using heroin, the sale of which is not carefully restricted under State laws. The drug is said to be fully as dangerous as morphine, and by many is held to be much worse, for the reason that it occasionally kills the victim outright. The heroin habit is far harder to overcome than the use of other drugs. The department, pending further action, especially warns all people who are unfamiliar with the drug to avoid all preparations containing the substances, and to take it only on the prescription of reputable physicians.

Its use seems to be especially notable in parts of Pennsylvania. This year the coroner's office in Philadelphia County has held inquests on five sudden deaths from heroin poisoning. In each case the victim was on a heroin debauch.

In New York two men selling cocaine and heroin to school children were arrested. One defendant had 1,900 pellets and pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor.

The word heroin on any label should be regarded as a danger signal.

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

If You Did Not See Opening Instalments Read This First

MARY O'NEILL begins her story by telling of how her father, born in Ellan, the son of peasants, had gone to America, become rich, and had then returned to his birthplace, where he married the daughter of Captain O'Neill of the O'Neills, and had changed his name from Daniel Neale to Daniel O'Neill. She tells of her own birth and of her father's disappointment for if a boy had been born he would have been Lord Raa, by right of his mother.

She tells of Father Dan, the priest, and of her mother, an invalid from her earliest memory, and of her Aunt Bridget, who came to keep house for Daniel O'Neill and brought with her her daughter and her stepdaughter. Her aunt soon came to run the house and to domineer over Mary and her mother and to make them both very unhappy.

Her closest friend is the son of Dr. Conrad, a boy named Martin, whose greatest delight is to play he is an explorer.

One day Mary and Martin go "exploring" in a boat and land on a rock. Their boat floats away, and late at night they are found, fast asleep in each other's arms.

It is decided, against her mother's protests, to send Mary to a convent in Rome. She starts in care of Father Dan, the priest, and on the journey she meets young Lord Raa. He tries to kiss her and she strikes him in the face, but finally at the intercession of Father Dan, she offers him her lips.

At the convent she is put in charge of Sister Angela and makes a friend of a girl named Mildred Bankes. She greatly admires an American girl named Alma Lier, but one day her idol makes fun of her, and her heart is nearly broken. Alma, however, finds that she is one of the O'Neills of Ellan and tells her that she will be her friend.

Mary is much disappointed at having to stay at the convent over the holidays, as all the other girls go to their homes.

Fifteenth Chapter.

MOST of the girls were depressed when they returned to school, but Alma was in high spirits, and on the first night of the term she crept over to my bed and asked what we had been doing during the holidays.

"Not a thing, eh?"

I answered that we had done lots of things and been very happy.

"Happy? In this gloomy old convent? You and Sister Angela alone?"

I told her we had two lay sisters—and then there was Father Giovanni.

"Father Giovanni? That serious old cross-bones?"

I said he was not always serious, and that on Christmas Day he had come to tea and kissed me under the mistletoe.

"Kissed you under the mistletoe!" said Alma, and then she whispered eagerly:

"He didn't kiss Sister Angela, did he?"

I suppose I was flattered by her interest, and this loosened my tongue, for I answered:

"He kissed her hand, though."

"Kissed her hand? My! * * * Of course she was very angry * * * wasn't she angry?"

I answered no, and in my simplicity I proceeded to prove this by explaining that Sister Angela had taken Father Giovanni down to the door, and when he was ill she had nursed him.

"Nursed him? In his own house, you mean?"

"Yes, at night, too, and she stayed until he was better, and caught a cold coming back."

"Well, I never!" said Alma, and I remember that I was very pleased with myself during this interview, for by the moonlight which was then shining into the room, I could see that Alma's eyes were sparkling.

The next night we recommended our conferences in bed, when Alma told us all about her holiday, which she had spent "way up in St. Moritz," among deep snow and thick ice, skating, bobbing, luging, and above all riding astride, and dragging a man on skis behind her.

"Such lots of fun," she said. And the best of it was at night when there were dances and fancy-dress balls with company which included all the smart people in Europe, and men who gave a girl such a good time if she happened to be pretty and was likely to have a dot.

"I DON'T BLAME YOU"

Alma had talked so eagerly and the girls had listened so intently that nobody was aware that Sister Angela had returned to the room until she stepped forward and said:

"Alma Lier, I'm ashamed of you. Go back to your bed, miss, this very minute."

The other girls crept away and I half covered my face with my bedclothes, but Alma stood up to Sister Angela and answered her back.

"Go to bed yourself, and don't speak to me like that, or you'll pay for your presumption."

"Pay? Presumption? You insolent thing, you are corrupting the whole school and are an utter disgrace to it. I warned you that I would tell the Reverend Mother what you are, and now I've a great mind to do it."

"Do it. I dare you to do it. Do it tonight, and tomorrow morning I will do something."

"What will you do, you brazen hussy?" said Sister Angela, but I could see that her lip was trembling.

"Never mind what. If I'm a hussy I'm not a hypocrite, and as for corrupting the school, and being a disgrace to it, I'll leave the Reverend Mother to say who is doing that."

Low as the light was I could see that Sister Angela was deadly pale. There was a moment of silence in which I thought she glanced in my direction, and then stammering something which I did not hear, she left the dormitory.

It was long before she returned, and when she did so I saw her creep into her cubicle and sit there for quite a great time before going to bed. My heart was thumping hard, for I had a vague feeling that I had been partly to blame for what had occurred, but after a while I fell asleep and remembered no more until I was awakened in the middle of the night by somebody kissing me in my sleep.

It was Sister Angela, and she was turning away, but I called her back, and she knelt by my bed and whispered:

"Hush! I know what has happened, but I don't blame you for it."

I noticed that she was wearing her out-door cloak, and that she was breathing rapidly, just as she did on the night she came from the chaplain's quarters, and when I asked if she was going anywhere she said yes, and if I ever heard anything against Sister Angela I was to think the best of her.

"But you are so good . . . "

"No, I am not good. I am very wicked. I should never have thought of being a nun, but I'm glad now that I'm only a novice and have never taken the vows."

After that she told me to go to sleep, and then she kissed me again, and I thought she was going to cry, but she rose hurriedly and left the room.

SISTER ANGELA GONE

Next morning after the getting-up bell had been rung, and I had roused myself to full consciousness, I found that four or five nuns were standing together near the door of the dormitory talking about something that had happened during the night—Sister Angela had gone!

Half an hour afterwards when, full of this exciting event, the girls went bustling down to the meeting room they found the nuns in great agitation over an incident of still deeper gravity—Father Giovanni also had disappeared!

A convent school is like a shell on the shore of a creek, always rumbling with the rumor of the little sea it lives under; and by noon the girls, who had been palpitating with curiosity, thought they knew everything that had happened—how at 4 in the morning Father Giovanni and Sister Angela had been seen to come out of the little door which connected the garden with the street; how at 7 they had entered a clothing emporium in the Corso, where going in at one door as priest and nun they had come out at another as ordinary civilians; how at 8 they had taken the first train to Civita Vecchia, arriving in time to catch a steamer sailing at 10, and how they were now on their way to England.

By some mysterious instinct of their sex the girls had gathered with glistening eyes in front of the chaplain's deserted quarters, where Alma leaned against the wall with her insteps crossed and while the others talked she smiled, as much to say, I told you so."

As for me I was utterly wretched, and being now quite certain that I was the sole cause of Sister Angela's misfortune, I was sitting under the tree in the middle of the garden, when Alma, surrounded by her usual group of girls, came down on me.

"What's this?" she said. "Margaret Mary crying? Feeling badly for Sister Angela, is she? Why, you little silly, you needn't cry for her. She's having the time of her life, she is!"

At this the girls laughed and shuddered, as they used to do when Alma told them stories, but just at that moment the nun with the stern face (she was the mother of the novices) came up and said, solemnly:

"Alma Lier, the Reverend Mother wishes to speak to you."

"To me?" said Alma, in a tone of surprise, but at the next moment she went off jauntily.

Hours passed and Alma did not return, and nothing occurred until afternoon "rosary," when the mother of the novices came again and taking me by the hand said:

ALMA SENT AWAY

"Come with me, my child."

I knew quite well where we were going to, and my lip was trembling when we entered the Reverend Mother's room, for Alma was there, sitting by the stove, and close beside her, with an angry look, was the stout lady in furs whom I had seen in the carriage at the beginning of the holidays.

"Don't be afraid," said the Reverend Mother, and drawing me to her side she asked me to tell her what I had told Alma about Sister Angela.

I repeated our conversation as nearly as I could remember it, and more than once Alma nodded her head as if in asent, but the Reverend Mother's face grew darker at every word and, seeing this, I said:

"But if Sister Angela did anything wrong I'm sure she was very sorry, for when she came back she said 'Father of all mankind, forgive all sinners . . . .'"

"Yes, yes, that will do," said the Reverend Mother, and then she handed me back to the Mother of the Novices, telling her to warn me to say nothing to the other children.

Alma did not return to us at dinner, or at recreation, or at chapel (when another chaplain said vespers), or even at 9 o'clock, when we went to bed. But next morning, almost as soon as the Mother of the Novices had left the dormitory, she burst into the room, saying:

"I'm leaving this old convent, girls. Mother has brought the carriage, and I've only come to gather up my belongings."

Nobody spoke, and while she wrapped up her brushes and combs in her nightdress she joked about Sister Angela and Father Giovanni and then about Mildred Bankes, whom she called "Reverend Mother Mildred," saying it would be her turn next.

"DON'T CRY FOR HER"

Then she tipped up her mattress, and taking a novel from under it she threw the book on my bed, saying:

"Margaret Mary will have to be your story-teller now. By-by, girls!"

Nobody laughed. For the first time Alma's humor had failed her, and when we went downstairs to the meeting room it was with sedate and quiet steps.

The nuns were all there, with their rosaries and crosses, looking as calm as if nothing had occurred, but the girls were thinking of Alma, and when, after prayers, during the five minutes of silence for meditation, we heard the wheels of a carriage going off outside, we knew what had happened—Alma had gone.

We were rising to go to mass when the Reverend Mother said:

"Children, I have a word to say to you. You all know one of our novices has left us. You also know that one of our scholars has just gone. It is my wish that you should forget both of them, and I shall look upon it as an act of disobedience if any girl in the convent ever mentions their names again."

All that day I was in deep distress, and when, night coming, I took my troubles to bed, telling myself I had now lost Alma also, and it was all my fault, somebody put her arms about me in the darkness and whispered:

"Mary O'Neill, are you awake?"

It was Mildred, and I suppose my snuffling answered her, for she said:

"You mustn't cry for Alma Lier. She was no friend of yours, and it was the best thing that ever happened to you when she was turned out of the convent."

Sixteenth Chapter.

A CHILD lives from hour to hour, and almost at the same moment that my heart was made desolate by the loss of my two friends it was quickened to a new interest.

Immediately after the departure of Sister Angela and Alma we were all gathered in the Meeting Room for our weekly rehearsal of the music of the Benediction—the girls, the novices, the nuns, the Reverend Mother, and a Maestro from the Pope's choir, a short fat man, who wore a black soutane and a short lace tippet.

Benediction was the only service of our church which I knew, being the one my mother loved best and could do most of for herself in the solitude of her invalid room, but the form used in the Convent differed from that to which I had been accustomed, and even the Tantum ergo and the O Salutaris Hostia I could not sing.

On this occasion a litany was added, which I had heard before, and then came a hymn of the Blessed Virgin which I remembered well. My mother sang it herself and taught me to sing it, so that when the Maestro, swinging his little ivory baton, began in his alto voice—

> "Ave maria stella,
> Dei Mater alma—"

I joined in with the rest, but sang in English instead of Latin.

Of all appeals to the memory that of music is the strongest, and after a moment I forgot that I was at school in Rome, being back in my mother's room in Ellan, standing by her piano and singing while she played. I think I must have let my little voice go, just as I used to do at home, when it rang up to the wooden rafters, for utterly lost to my surroundings I had got as far as

> "Virgin of all virgins,
> To thy shelter take us—"

when suddenly I became aware that I alone was singing," the children about me being silent, and even the Maestro's baton slowing down. Then I saw that all eyes were turned in my direction, and overwhelmed with confusion I stopped, for my voice broke and glittered into silence.

"Go on, little angel," said the Maestro, but I was trembling all over by this time and could not utter a sound.

Nevertheless the Reverend Mother said: "Let Mary O'Neill sing the hymn in church in future."

WON BY SINGING.

As soon as I had conquered my nervousness at singing in the presence of the girls, I did so, singing the first line of each verse alone, and I remember to have heard that the congregations on Sunday afternoons grew larger and larger, until, within a few weeks, the church was densely crowded.

Perhaps my childish heart was stirred by vanity in all this, for I remember that ladies in beautiful dresses would crowd to the bronze screen that separated us from the public and whisper among themselves "Which is she?" "The little one in the green scarf with the big eyes!" "God bless her!"

But surely it was a good thing that at length life had begun to have a certain joy for me, for as time went on I became absorbed in the life of the Convent, and particularly in the services of the church, so that home itself began to fade away, and when the holidays came round and excuses were received for not sending for me, the pain of my disappointment became less and less until at last it disappeared altogether.

If ever a child loved her mother I did, and there were moments when I reproached myself with not thinking of her for a whole day. These were the moments when a letter came from Father Dan, telling me she was less well than before and her spark of life had to be coaxed and trimmed or it would splutter out altogether.

But the effect of such warnings was wiped away when my mother wrote herself, saying I was to be happy as she was happy, because she knew that though so long separated we should soon be together, and the time would not seem long.

Not understanding the deeper meaning that lay behind words like these, I was nothing loath to put aside the thought of home until little by little it faded away from me in the distance, just as the island itself had done on the day when I sailed out with Martin Conrad on our great voyage of exploration to St. Mary's Rock.

Thus two years and a half passed since I arrived in Rome before the great fact befell me which was to wipe all other facts out of my remembrance.

It was Holy Week, the season of all seasons for devotion to the Sacred Heart, and our Convent was palpitating with the joy of its spiritual duties, the many offices, the masses for the repose of the souls in Purgatory, the preparations for Tenebrae, with the chanting of the Miserere, and for Holy Saturday and Easter Day, with the singing of the Gloria and the return of the Alleluia.

But beyond all this for me were the arrangements for my first confession, which, coming a little late, I made with ten or twelve other girls of my sodality, feeling so faint when I took my turn and knelt by the grating, and heard the whispering voice within, like something from the unseen, something supernatural, something divine, that I forgot all I had come to say and the priest had to prompt me.

THE BLOW FALLS.

And beyond that again were the arrangements for my first communion, which was to take place on Easter morning, when I was to walk in procession with the other girls, dressed all in white, behind a gilded figure of the Virgin, singing "Ave maris stella," through the piazza into the church, where one of the Cardinals, in the presence of the fathers and mothers of the other children, was to put the Holy Wafer on our tongues and we were to know for the first time the joy of communion with our Lord.

But that was not to be for me.

On the morning of Holy Wednesday the blow fell. The luminous gray of the Italian dawn was filtering through the windows of the dormitory, like the light in a tomb, and a multitude of little birds on the old tree in the garden were making a noise like water falling on small stones in a fountain, when the Mother of the Novices came to my bedside and said:

"You are to go to the Reverend Mother as soon as possible, my child."

Her voice, usually severe, was so soft that I knew something had happened, and when I went upstairs I also knew, before the Reverend Mother had spoken, what she was going to say.

"Mary," she said, "I am sorry to tell you that your mother is ill."

I listened intently, fearing that worse would follow.

"She is very ill—very seriously ill, and she wishes to see you. Therefore you are to go home immediately."

HUB GIRL PUPIL DIES WHEN NAVY CALLS FIANCE

Boston art students and officers at the Charlestown Navy Yard were deeply moved today to learn in dispatches from Hartford that the shock of her fiance, Captain Roger Walcott Davis, being torn from her side by orders of the Navy Department had hastened the death of Miss Margaret Merriam of that city. Miss Merriam, as holder of the Hartford art fellowship, had been studying at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and was well known among the younger people in art circles here.

Miss Merriam, whose engagement to Captain Davis was recently announced, fell suddenly ill with diphtheria. Her fiance lingered at her bedside until the last moment. Applications for an extension of leave on account of her condition were refused. Now word of her death has been telegraphed to him at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, whence Washington orders insisted he hasten.

Miss Merriam, who was twenty-three, was the daughter of the Rev. Alexander R. Merriam of the Hartford Theological Seminary. The leave taking of the couple was particularly touching. Miss Merriam survived Captain Davis' departure only a few hours.

JUNIOR CHARITY CLUB DANCE A SMART AFFAIR

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

One of the smart events of this evening will be the second in the series of supper dances given at the Copley-Plaza by the Junior Charity Club. This is one of the most successful organizations of smart young women and young matrons working constantly for their pet charity, and during each season they give many entertainments which net them a snug little sum for their cause.

Among the well known women who are matrons for this affair are Mrs. Edgar M. Young, Mrs. Guy Currier, Mrs. Ellis Hollingsworth, Mrs. R. L. Agassiz, Mrs. H. Staples Potter and Miss Anne C. Warren.

• • •

An important event this afternoon is the performance at the Peabody House by children of the West End of "The Snow Queen," when several of this season's prettiest buds, all interested in the work of the settlement, will be ushers. Miss Charlotte Read, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read of Manchester, who last Fall forsook her society life and became a permanent resident of the Peabody settlement, is acting as general manager.

Miss Leonora Loveman wrote the play. Among the buds who will act as ushers are Miss Olivia Ames, Miss Esther Turner, Miss Beverly Richards, Miss Helen Richards, Miss Josephine Sturgis, Miss Florence Lee, Miss Harriet Fessenden, Miss Caroline Cabot, Miss Faith Stanwood, the Misses Anita and Susette Sturgis, the Misses Katherine and Pauline Pollard and Miss Josephine Rantoul.

• • •

Mrs. John L. Thorndike is opening her home, No. 181 Marlboro street, for the 5 o'clock tea which she is giving this afternoon to members of the L'Alliance Francaise, in honor of the French official lecturer to Harvard, Fernand Baldensperger.

• • •

Tonight will be a happy night for the younger girls, not yet debutantes, who will enjoy the second in their series of smart Saturday night dances at the Somerset. The patronesses for these affairs are Mrs. Rudolphe L. Agassiz, Mrs. William T. Councilman and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse. Mrs. Agassiz's second daughter, Miss Anna, and Mrs. Converse's second daughter, Miss Augusta, will both be debutantes of next year and will be prominent at the dance this evening. Mrs. Councilman's pretty daughter, Isabella, is in the same group of girls, but is away at school and consequently unable to attend the dances. Among the prominent girls who will be much in evidence this evening are Miss Muriel Saltonstall, Miss Katherine Sigourney, Miss Margaret Allen, Anna Thorndike, Maud Windeler, Elizabeth Coolidge, Christine Snelling, Gertrude Lovett and Margaret Rotch.

Blames Boys for Outrage at Rally

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

My attention has been called to a signed statement by the Brier Associates, relative to the disturbances at the rally held Thursday evening in Jubilee Hall, in behalf of the Hon. Thomas J. Kenny, candidate for Mayor, at which meeting I presided.

What the signers of the statement failed to relate was the organized outrageous treatment accorded to Mr. Kenny and his escort, including members of the press, by the gang of boys who were wearing Mr. Curley's buttons.

I believe it is the duty of the Boston press to voice its unanimous and emphatic disapproval of such indecent tactics, which is disgracing the fair name of our city.

Very truly yours,

SAMUEL H. BOROFSKY.

HERRESHOFF BOAT MAY BE "CAT RIGGED"

By H. C. THOMAS.

Word came from Bristol, R. I., today that the Herreshoff cup defence racer is likely to be a sort of "cat rigged" boat. This bit of news is not startling to the New England yachtsmen who know Charles Francis Adams 2d.

Mr. Adams is and has been for years a believer in the big sail idea. His unbeaten sonder Hispania of a couple of seasons ago was an innovation so far as rig was concerned. It had a high peaked mainsail of the catboat type, and results spoke for themselves.

Mr. Adams has been a catboat man for years. He was born and bred, so far as the yachting game goes, right in a section of New England—Quincy Bay—where this type of boat is the leader in the racing game today.

CARRIED TOO MUCH SAIL.

His sonder boat that did not get to the German races last year was rigged very much like the old Harpoon, and it was not because of the fact that it carried more sail than was allowed according to the rules and could not get down to the racing conditions.

The belief right now around Massachusetts clubs is that when "Charlie" Adams gets his sail ideas working to perfection and with "Bob" Emmons and himself on the deck engineering the cup defence boat the other two boats will have to "go some" to keep within striking distance.

Herreshoff, Adams and Emmons are a very bad combination to fool with when anything is at stake. The professional skippers who have raced against Adams and Emmons admit that they are both on the job every minute and know the ins and outs of the racing game.

MAY BE MODIFIED N. Y. 50-FOOTER

Also comes the word that the Herreshoff boat may be a modified New York fifty-footer. Anyone who was at Marblehead last Summer and watched Emmons handle and sail one of these came immediately to the conclusion that they would figure in the plans of the new cup boats.

Just what is coming from the Herreshoff yards in the shape of a cup defence boat is uncertain as more secrecy prevails around the cup boat down in the Rhode Island yard than in any other spot on earth.

Milburn Will Be in the Polo Lineup

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Devereux Milburn, known as the greatest back in the world, will without doubt be in the lineup of the American polo team against the challenging Britishers next June. Some concern was felt that Milburn might not play this year on account of his recent marriage. No sooner had the polo player returned from his honeymoon, however, than he began to take an interest in the polo situation. He visited the Whitney stables at Wheatley Hills and had a long conference with Larry Fitzpatrick, the pony manager for the American team. His friends say that Dev will be in the series to sure.

Halpin Out to Lower 600 Yards Record

Captain Tom Halpin of the B. A. A. team has strong hopes of lowering Ted Meredith's record for 600 yards indoors at the Seventy-fourth Regiment games, in Buffalo tonight. Halpin is in the pink of condition and, with the proper competition, he believes he will be able to accomplish the feat. The present record is 1 minute 22 4-5 seconds.

Says Harvard Will Have Advantage

During a recent visit to Atlanta where he was a guest of H. H. Atkinson, Jr., of Harvard, Captain Ketcham, of the Yale football team last season, was asked about the material that would be on hand for a team at Yale next year. He appeared to fear that Harvard would have the advantage, at least at the beginning of the season, because of the fact that practically all of her "letter men," including Brickley, will be back.

"I believe the intersectional football games that are being planned between the leading teams of the East and the West will be a great thing for the sport," he said.

$12,000 Believed to Be Cobb's Salary

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 10.—In mailing contracts for 1914 to the Tigers, President Navin let it be known that Ty Cobb's called for the same salary that he received last year, and that it was for one year only. But he did not make public how much that salary is. The figure, $12,000, has been reiterated so many times in the last nine months that it is generally accepted as the true indication of what Ty has drawn down.

ED SMITH'S TALKS ON SPORTS

DAZZLED apparently by the stories of the huge amounts of money to be earned by the fighter in foreign lands, many a rattled-brained kid of the third and fourth class in his division has taken the trip to Europe, very much to his sorrow. Just the other day a bunch of them returned from England absolutely broke, but rich in the experience that they gained during the trip. In the party that returned were Young Kid Broad, Benny Kaufman and Johnny Mayo. According to one of the Philadelphia papers they went to Europe at the behest of a gambler, who saw some profit in the jaunt for himself only.

* * *

AND that's exactly the way the trip turned out. The boys found that there was no more money in Europe for the fighter than there is in America, and in many places not nearly as much. In addition, they were eaten alive with training expenses, and in a country where they did not speak nor understand the language of the native it was mighty poor picking for them.

* * *

EVEN the better grade of fighter finds that there is little in a European trip. Frank Moran, who is one of the best of the American white heavyweights, has gone broke several times trying to scare up a match on the other side, and even the negro heavies, who have been battling in Paris and England, find that there isn't much fat picking.

* * *

ACCORDING to the story of one of the returning party, if it hadn't been for the kindness of Sam Langford and his manager, Joe Woodman, they never would have been able to get out of France and would still be there, with some huge bills for board staring them in the face. And now they are telling all other American fighters to let well enough alone and stick to their own firesides.

* * *

CALVIN DEMAREST, the young billiard star, is not at all in sympathy with the peculiar stand Willie Hoppe, the present champion at both styles of balkline billiards, is taking regarding match play. And Calvin doesn't hesitate to make his ideas known. "While both of us could make some money by hooking up for at least an exhibition tour, I'm off him forever unless he changes his methods," Calvin said. "He's too expensive a luxury for me to fuss with any further. I imagine he has cost me in the neighborhood of $3,000 already, and that is about all I wish to spend."

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Levinsky, who has offered no excuses for his defeat at the hands of McAllister, says that he is still a contender for the white heavyweight title. His right to a battle with Gunboat Smith will be disputed by Porky Flynn, the Boston pugilist, at the National Sporting Club next Tuesday night. Tom O'Rourke, who is supervising Flynn's training preparations, says that his man will win by a knockout—a bold assertion. Flynn will have an advantage of twenty pounds and if he is really fit Levinsky will have the liveliest kind of a time.

Federals Said to Be After 'Buddy' Ryan

PORTLAND, Jan. 10.—Buddy Ryan, ex-Cleveland outfielder, who has been turned over to Toledo, but who may come to Portland in the deal between the Beavers and Naps, involving Ty Lober, is the latest ball player to be approached by the Federal League. Buddy has received an enticing offer from the "outlaws," but says that he will have to consider it very carefully before taking such a long chance. He wants to play on the Pacific Coast next season, enjoying better health out here, and for that reason will probably turn it down.

Cincinnati to Have Some Cheap Boxing

CINCINNATI, Jan. 10.—A new club will break into the local field in the immediate future, with popular-priced shows as its platform. "Boxing hasn't paid so far in Cincinnati," explains one of the new promoters, "for the simple reason that most of the fight-fans can't afford to pay gilt-edged prices.

"Fifty-cent boxing has made big fortunes for several promoters in Philadelphia, and their receipts are bigger, right along, than are taken in by the $2 and $3 shows."

INTEREST IN BIG AUTO SHOW HOLDS TO LAST

NEW YORK, Jan 10.—This, the last lay of the motor show, finds no diminution of the interest shown. The how as a whole has been eminently uccessful.

The Reo, handled in Boston by the . M. Linscott Company, is shown in several models and one chassis. This year the Reo people are marketing their cars direct to the agents, and the change is meeting with great favor. But few changes have been made in the Reo of a year ago, the main difference being in the body design, improvement of the universal joint and a slight change in the transmission roller bearings.

The Cartercar is shown in six models on four-cylinder chasses. The smaller car is a new production, he main feature of which is the Cartrcar friction transmission with the silent chain drive to the rear axe. George Wetherbee feels confident Is New England business will multip.

A roadster and a six-passengr touring car, mounted on both te four and six-cylinder chasses, are o be found at the Stutz exhibit. Manger M. F. Chase of Boston is ke busy telling how Gil Anderson, t Stutz racing driver, won the Elgi national trophy and broke the trac record.

The Pope-Hartford new model 35 i of the four-cylinder type, with t cylinders cast in pairs. F. H. Luca is the Boston distributor.

V. C. Charles of Boston is to b found at the interstate exhibit, wher is shown the six-cylinder car tha made such a hit last year. The ca has a five-passenger body, the moto is in unit with the clutch and gea set, and the cylinders are cast e bloc.

The Jackson people are showin three models, two fours and one si J. L. Judd and A. H. Sowers of Boston are here.

The Mitchell booth shows sixes and fours. The general features of the chasses are alike, the motors being of the same design, with T-head cylinders cast in pairs.

An air-cooled car of prominence is the Franklin, which is made with six different body types on one chassis. The new series includes a six-cylinder motor mounted on a chassis which still maintains the factor of lightness that has characterized the Franklin. Left-hand drive and centre control are provided. Otto Lawton of Boston finds his hands full.

The Chevrolet has a special exhibit at the Broadway salesrooms and at the new Chevrolet factory on Eleventh avenue. W. C. Sills, manager of the Boston branch, is in charge.

Ned Hanlon After Tyler for Federals

According to information received from New York, Ned Hanlon, owner of the Baltimore Federal League Club, will confer with George "Lefty" Tyler of the Boston National League club at Lynn today to try to induce the Braves' star southpaw to sign a contract with the Baltimore outlaws. If this be true, Hanlon is the third Federal League man to approach Tyler, he having previously received offers from Manager Tinker of Chicago and Manager Mordecai Brown of St. Louis. Tyler said yesterday that he would probably see President Gaffney of the Braves today, and if the terms of his contract did not suit him he would jump. It is known that Tyler is not satisfied with his present salary from the Boston club, and if he does not get a raise he may carry out his threat.

Lawson Robertson, trainer of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, will send his full list of champions to the Irish-American A. A. games at Mechanics building January 31. The "Winged Fist" organization has decided to do all in its power to make the initial game of the new sister association here in Boston one of the greatest sets of games ever held.

The champions whom Robertson will send will be headed by Captain Mel Sheppard, the peerless middle-distance runner. Sheppard will start in the local 600-yard event. Abel Kiviat will be entered in the mile run and will start from scratch. "Big Babe" McDonald, the policeman champion shot-putter, who won the Olympic shot-putting championship, will compete in the sixteen-pound shot event.

As yet Robertson has not decided whether Hannes Kolehmainen will be on hand for the special three-mile invitation event, but if the Finn can be brough back to proper condition he will positively be a starter. Pat Conway, founder of the New York Irish-American A. C., has been invited to referee the local games.

Conditions—Boston American Picture Answer Contest

The Boston American new 1914 Picture Answer Contest is a contest of skill and judgment, open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

One hundred and fifty-five cash prizes will be given, absolutely free, by the Boston American to the winners.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

The contest will consist of seventy-five puzzle pictures, to be printed one each day, consecutively, in the daily and Sunday American, first picture Sunday, January 4th.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, will not debar any one from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two, three, four or five SETS of answers, but each SET must contain only ONE answer to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded to any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American, or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the puzzle picture furnished by the Boston American or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

Do NOT send your solution in "list" form, i. e., do not write answers under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should contestants send in their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day, and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered to the Boston American Contest Headquarters, at No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in all together, at one time.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Picture Answer Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

As all answers will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rate, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse any sets of answers on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no answer book to buy. A list of several hundred names or titles will be printed in the Sunday American each week during the life of the contest. This list, appearing each Sunday, will contain, among others, the CORRECT ANSWERS to the pictures to be used during the week beginning with each Sunday list publication.

Contestants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the "Picture Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass." Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the contest, and the decision of the Boston American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a contestant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

B.A.A. SEVEN TO PLAY VICTORIA TEAM AFTER ALL

Osgood, left wing	right wing, Watt
Hicks, centre	centre, Bignell
Clifford, rover	rover, Hale
Foote, right wing	left wing, Mowatt
Huntington, cover point	cover point, Eaers
Foster, point	point, Patterson
Canterbury, goal	goal, Law

The much-talked-of hockey game between the Boston Athletic Association and the Victorias of Montreal will be played tonight at the Arena. The B. A. A. and Victorias held a long conference and it was proven to the entire satisfaction of all that the Victoria Hockey Club is an amateur organization.

In one of the roughest games ever played in this city the Victorias were defeated by the Boston Athletic Association last year at the Arena, but the Canadians claim to be represented by a faster team this season, and every man feels confident that the game tonight will be a victory for the boys from across the border.

Patterson and Watt, who are two of the best players on the Victorias, did not take part in last night's game against the Irish-American A. A. and as a result the Canadians were greatly weakened. With these two stars in the line-up tonight, the B. A. A. will have a much harder contest on its hands than did the I. A. A. A.

As Pete Sortwell, the former Harvard player who has been playing on the wing for the B. A. A., has quit hockey, Charlie Foote will be used in his place.

Hinkey Calls Out Yale Football Men

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 10.—Head Coach Frank Hinkey of the Yale football eleven has lost no time in starting practice for the coming season. He has called out the candidates for the centre rush and quarterback positions.

Combined with the centres are the guard candidates who may possibly be called upon to transfer themselves to the snapback place.

It is announced here that Henry Ketcham, captain of the Yale eleven the past season, will be unable to accept an invitation to return next Fall as a member of the coaching staff. Ketcham has made other plans.

Tigers Want Harvard Eli Game Week Apart

In an effort to arrange the Harvard-Princeton and Yale-Princeton games so that they will be played a week apart Princeton will appoint a committee to confer with the athletic authorities at Cambridge and New Haven to see what can be done in bringing about a change. The present Princeton schedule carries the Crimson and Blue on successive Saturdays, but the Tigers hope that their two big rivals will consent to a shift, which they claim will leave their men in much better condition for both contests.

Track work will begin at Tufts Monday. Coach McDonald has issued a call for candidates and hopes to round out a successful team for the Winter meets. Captain Teel and McClellan are the only veterans who will report, but much is expected of Heys, Penaligan, former Winchester star, and Coddington, the Medford boy. The Medford college will be given its first tryout in the Irish-American meet, January 31. Tufts has also entered men in the B. A. A., Coast Artillery Corps and Providence meets.

Things to Think About—XI.

Baseball Altruism.

WE hope that every reader of this column who likes to give his mind a rest occasionally welcomes, as we do, the advent of Governor Tener in big league baseball. While we have laid ourselves out at some pains and length to boost thought for its own sake, we are not above slipping you an anodyne now and then to keep you from getting overtrained mentally. With this in view, some lines from Governor Tener's recent statement on the Federal League are subjoined:

* * *

"BASEBALL today owes its popularity and very existence to organization. Such organization alone has developed and will preserve and perpetuate the game to and for the American people (cheers). Nevertheless, organized baseball is being attacked today by those, and those only, who desire to reap commercial benefits thereby (prolonged applause)."

* * *

NEVER before have we felt an irresistible yearning to meet a baseball magnate, but after these lines have soaked in we are considering a trip to Harrisburg to grasp Governor Tener by the hand and beg him to let us stick around and watch his brain work. We would like to tell him how much we are with him as a leader of the forces of altruism, which number Jim Gaffney, Charley Ebbets, Garry Herrmann, Charley Murphy and others in the impending Armageddon. We would like to assure him that he can count on us in the struggle against these ambitious and greedy guys who are trying to grab some coin by starting a new league.

* * *

CONSIDER the shock of this assault on such men! We almost hope that Mr. Ebbets' ship will go down with him that he may be spared the horror of returning to find that in his absence men have sprung up in the land of the free who want to make money out of baseball. Mr. Herrmann and Mr. Murphy are grief-stricken to the point that they are going to try to put the new league out of business in the courts. And no one may guess what eagles of disillusionment are tearing at the great heart of Mr. Gaffney.

* * *

BUT there is hope. The Federal League will leave the National League the glory if the latter will allow the new-comers to make the money. They will be permitted to perpetuate baseball until they are blue in the face, without a dissenting vote, and no one will put a limit on the amount of money they may feel like spending. There is also cheer in the reflection that organization owes its life to the popularity of baseball and this popularity will endure long after the present organization is forgotten.

* * *

GOVERNOR TENER owes his salary of $25,000 a year to organization, but that is about all we can see that it has done for anybody. And the American people's love for the game would probably survive even the blow of a reduction in the great chieftain's pay.

* * *

AFTER the Cincinnati conference the position of the magnates seems to be that, while the players have not yet got their rights, they WILL get 'em if they don't look out.

* * *

IF Mr. Wilson wants to make the blockade of Mexico a popular measure he has only to wait until after Johnson and Gunboat Smith have gone down there to fight.

We always looked on Tommy Burns as a clever pugilist. The fact that he has decided not to re-enter the ring confirms our judgment.

* * *

Even if Mordy Brown lost a $1,000 bonus (which he probably never would have collected) he showed great strategy in signing with St. Louis. Even if he finishes last he won't be any worse than Huggins or Rickey.

* * *

In view of the fact that Charlie Murphy's chauffeur was fined for speeding, we'd hate to be running his typewriter.

Maranville Will Stick to Braves

Walter Maranville, the brilliant young shortstop of the Braves, has been approached by the Federal League. He declares he has received offers from Manager Mordecai Brown of St. Louis and Otto Knabe, but says he will decline both. Maranville will confer with President Gaffney of the Braves today, at which time it is expected he will sign a 1914 contract with the Boston club.

"I consider that I have been used well," said Maranville today. "I have no grievance against organized baseball, and there are many years ahead of me before I would be forced to think of going back."

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A.H.C. Mitchell

IF Jimmy Sheckard, the National League outfielder, were a trifle younger, if he had the speed that marked his prime as a ball player, the baseball world would no doubt be treated to an exhibition of [illegible] agility that would make a [illegible] jealous.

BELIEVE us, Jimmy [illegible] jumper—of was [illegible] before he slowed up. It was during the dark and gloomy days when the American League was making the National League squirm by signing the star players that he proved his ability to leap. Jimmy Sheckard jumped back and forth from one league to the other eight separate and distinct times, breaking all world's records.

IT is understood that Sheckard has applied for the job of managing one of the Federal League clubs. If he gets the job he will never be back in the majors again. He is getting too old and too slow for the big show.

PRESIDENT FULTZ of the Players' Fraternity has returned to New York and reports that the players are well pleased at what they accomplished at Cincinnati, where their demands were discussed and disposed of. Asked what the Fraternity's attitude toward the Federal League was, he replied, with emphasis:

"Absolutely neutral. The Fraternity will not advise players to sign with the Federals and will not advise them to go back to their old employers. That is a matter that concerns each player personally. I as president have no right to dictate one way or another. Officially I have no opinion to express as to the Federal League movement."

FULTZ'S statement is hardly satisfactory to those interested in organized baseball. One of the officials of the big league clubs said:

"Why does Fultz sidestep the issue? Why does he say that the Fraternity is neutral? If Fultz is sincere in his attitude toward organized baseball why doesn't he order the players to return to their old employers?

"In a labor strike, if an employer grants the demands of the union the strikers are ordered to go back to work, not to continue a tieup. The same conditions apply to the Fraternity. The players refused to sign with organized league clubs until their demands were granted. Now that the commission and the national board have yielded members of the Fraternity are preparing to jump to the Federals. Why does not Fultz stop this unfairness?"

THERE is a well grounded belief among well-posted baseball men that few or any players under reserve to the two Boston clubs will be captured by the Federal League. As far as can be learned the promoters of the Feds are not going after the Red Sox or Braves very strong. That play to sign Joe Wood might have been made for advertising purposes. The Federal Leaguers must have known, as everybody else knew, that Smoky Joe had already signed a contract with the Red Sox management, and as the Feds have strenuously announced that they propose to keep off players that have signed, the play for Wood could have been for nothing else except publicity.

$5000 SALARIES FOR PLAYERS TO JOIN FEDERALS

By DAVENPORT

Ballplayers wanted—no cheap men need apply. That's the motto of the Federal League.

The nifty sum handed over by the Chicago Federals for Joe Tinker is hardly a drop in the bucket. From some unknown source the shekels have been pouring into the treasury of the new outlaw league, and today the new-born babe in the baseball world is coming across with the talk that [illegible] money.

Mordecai Brown has been instructed to go out in the cold, relentless world and pick up a few ballplayers at not more than $5,000 a year.

Mordecai is manager of the St. Louis club in the new organization, and he says he will have a ball club that will make Joe Tinker's aggregation look like a bunch of amateurs on a corner lot.

$5,000 SALARY FOR PLAYER.

Otto Stifel, the St. Louis millionaire brewer, who is backing the Federal League in that city, has simply told Manager Brown to go out and get a ball club. He placed the limit at $5,000, but added: "If you sign a player at something over that sum, see me first."

Brown is now dickering with a big league star at $8,500. "We will not depend upon Tinker, Brown, or Stovall to make our league famous," says President Gilmore.

"We appreciate the fact that stars are needed, but they must be surrounded by capable constellations in order that the Federal League heavens may be well illuminated, and with that idea in mind we are daily signing big league players for our various clubs."

The officials of the Federal League are daily in receipt of hundreds of letters from stars and would-be stars who are anxious to cast their lots with the new league, but experienced men are culling the lists and President James Gilmore promises that when he issues his first bulletin of contracts signed there will be a furore in the baseball world.

"The big fellows are saying we are depending upon stars to win us a reputation," said President Gilmore. "They have hit the nail on the head and they will be surprised when they hear the names of the stars we have signed."

JUMPS NOT SO BIG.

The head of the new league has been comparing jumps of the two big leagues with those of his own and he has discovered that the National League players must travel even a greater distance than will the players in the Federal League.

From Boston to St. Louis is a decidedly longer jump than from Toronto to Kansas City.

"We are not worrying about the jumps," says the head of the new league, "and so far we have been able to notice the only fellow who is worrying is the other fellow."

The big noise made by the baseball infant has attracted so much attention and interest that moneyed men are now trying their best to get in on the first floor.

President Weeghman of the Chicago club says he has a number of letters from Chicago business men who are anxious to secure some shares in the stock of the club. The same is true in other cities and the officials of the new league are now confident the financial end has been well taken care of.

President Gilmore is now busy signing umpires for the season and hopes to announce his list of officials within a few days.

GREATER LOVE ✤ ✤ True Story of Boston's Little Lost Sister Who Found Herself

By JANET WRIGHT

CHAPTER XIII.

Continued

Susie was pleased at his friendliness, and she unbosomed herself with the perfect frankness of a baby, once you win its confidence. She not only told him who she was, where she came from and where she was living, but she proceeded to tell him who Mrs. Rich was, what her husband did for a living, and all her mistress' affairs.

Mrs. Rich, it happened, was a fairly regular customer at this particular restaurant, and the waiter received the gossip gleefully, and called others to hear. Between them they pumped the girl dry, and she was delighted with the enthusiasm of her audience.

She ordered dish after dish of ice cream and calmly ate them—how many she could not remember—until at last the supper rush began, and customers gradually filtered in.

And then her particular waiter—forced to end their chat, asked her if she would not like to meet some of his friends.

Susie was pleased as punch, and told him so.

"I'd love to," she repeated. And the man nodded, and explained:

"Good. But there don't happen to be any around yet. You see supper is just beginning. You come in some evening, and I'll introduce you."

TREMENDOUSLY EXCITED

Susie left, with goodness knows how many dishes of ice cream inside her, and made her way home, tremendously excited and pleased with her adventure. She was so proud of herself that when Mrs. Rich met her at the door and asked, "What makes you so late?" she answered with perfect frankness:

"I went to the restaurant where we were yesterday."

Now Mrs. Rich had been ready enough to take the girl there in the beginning, but at the same time was amazed that Susie should have gone alone. "Don't you know that's no place for girls to go by themselves?" she demanded.

Susie was nonplussed. "Why, I thought it was all right. They were awful nice to me!"

Mrs. Rich gasped, "Who was 'awful nice' to you?" she snapped. "Who did you talk to?"

"Why—the waiter," admitted Susie, beginning to be a little frightened.

Mrs. Rich's foot began to tap the floor. "Hm," she mused quietly. "What did you tell him? Did you tell him anything about me?"

TURNED FROM HOUSE

And then Susie confessed how she had bared all the details of Mrs. Rich's life—that is, all she happened to know. And Mrs. Rich, from quite rage, went into hysterical weeping and from that to furious anger again. When the girl finished, without fifteen minutes' delay she packed her out of the house, and this was her last word:

"Go let your waiter-friend take care of you."

* * *

Well, I suppose anyone that believed in betting would have placed long odds against Susie after that. But as a matter of fact the girl came out all right; for Mrs. Rich's attitude had thoroughly frightened her, and she had no notion of going back to the restaurant.

Instead, she went that night to a neighbor's house and begged permission to stay there over night. She asked their advice as to what to do—and the result was that she reached me, through one of the societies, the next day, and I was able to find work for her. Today she is earning $6 a week and her board and lodging as a housemaid.

* * *

Ruth lived in Salem, and up to the time that she was graduated from high school, had scarcely once visited Boston. The year she was twenty-one, a cousin who lived in Boston invited her to come here for a visit. This cousin was a woman of thirty who had been married and deserted by her husband. She and Ruth's mother were intimate and Ruth was allowed to accept the invitation without any protest.

OUT TO SUPPER

The cousin's name was Sara Hayes, and she was a stenographer in a down town office. She lived on Hemenway street. The first evening after Ruth's arrival, at about 7 o'clock, Mrs. Hayes was just saying: "What shall we do this evening?" when the telephone rang. She left the instrument in a rapturous excitement and cried:

"Two dandy fellows want us to go out to supper. Dick Patton is a good friend of mine, and he's going to bring along some one for you."

Ruth was enthusiastic, and had no trace of misgiving. The two slipped on hats and coats, and were ready when the men arrived. Patton was a man of thirty-five, while his companion, whom he introduced as Bob Jones, was much younger. They found a taxicab waiting down stairs. It was Ruth's first ride in a taxi, and when they alighted at one of the Washington street restaurants, she was bubbling with excitement.

They ordered dinner, and Patton asked Mrs. Hayes what she would have to drink. She suggested champagne. Ruth protested that she had never drank anything, but they laughed and said:

"Oh, well, you'd better have a glass of beer anyway,"—and in the face of their good natured raillery, she could not refuse.

She found the beer bitter and unpleasant—but drank it in a "do or die" spirit—and had scarcely finished it when a second bottle of champagne was ordered. Before she realized it, she was sipping the tingling stuff from a glass they placed before her.

When she woke in the Hemenway street apartment next morning, she found a note waiting from Mrs. Hayes:

> Sorry I had to leave you. Had to get to work. Sleep as late as you want. I'll be home by five.

But Ruth was sick. Her head ached. She wanted to go home, and at last, in mid-afternoon, made her way to the North Station and surprised her family, arriving at home in time for supper. She was completely miserable and remorseful, and her first thought was to tell her mother everything.

BECAME INSANE.

Mrs. Hutchins must have been mentally unbalanced before. At any rate, when Ruth had hardly begun her story, the mother became hysterical, and the next day was taken to an institution, violently insane. She recovered three years later, and to this day I do not believe she knows of her daughter's misfortune.

Mr. Hutchins, broken with grief for his wife, would have nothing to do with Ruth. He tolerated her at home, and that was all. And after a month of this, she determined to come to Boston and find work. She wrote to Mrs. Hayes and asked advice. Her former hostess did not reply to the letter.

> This serial is written in the form of the life story of a country girl who fell victim to conditions in Boston. The names used are all fictitious, but no character appears in the serial that is not taken from real life. No important incident occurs which has not actually happened in Boston within five years. And the conditions portrayed are minimized, rather than exaggerated.
>
> The serial is offered as a picture of the lives of Boston's Little Lost Sisters. It is designed to shed some light on causes underlying the terrible conditions of the city; and it is hoped some remedies may be suggested.
>
> The facts upon which the serial is based were given to the AMERICAN by one of Boston's best informed social workers, who vouches for every statement. The serial is in the form of the life story of JANET WRIGHT—one of the Little Lost Sisters who found herself—and is told by herself.

Then the girl wrote to the Associated Charities, and through them eventually I came in touch with her.

Ruth had a harder fight than any girl in all my experience. There was in her a treacherous old strain of erratic stock—perhaps from her mother, who had gone insane—and though she was desperately determined in her efforts, again and again I was ready to despair of her. We found her work as a house servant, and three times she was discharged by the mistress, "without references." Each time Ruth came a little nearer giving up. And then we got her a place in a store—clerking at six dollars a week, that brought her to her feet.

I have always thought it was the influence of the good man she met there that did it. His name is Pat O'Hagan, and he worked in the necktie department for a while, and then in the shoe department. Ruth all this time was selling notions at a counter half the length of the store away, but they managed to see each other often, and the man seemed to imbue Ruth with new strength almost beyond understanding.

A year after she came to us, I was as sure of her as I was myself. The best of it was, she was sure of herself; she knew her own strength now, and her weakness, and faced both without attempt at evasion or deceit. She came to me one day and told me that O'Hagan wanted to marry her. "And I've told him all about myself, too," she declared wonderingly.

Between them, I doubted they were earning enough to live in anything like comfort. Yet it was such rare good fortune for the girl that I advised her to marry the man.

Ruth hesitated. "I don't know," she said at last. And then she explained that she liked Pat a great deal, but that she wasn't sure she loved him; that in any case she thought it best to wait a few months to make sure of her own feelings, and of his.

* * *

I must confess I worried about Ruth after that. I was anxious to have her married and safely settled down—even though I had never seen O'Hagan, and he might be the last man in the world for her. And then came a happening that pushed the two together as though with the hands of Fate. For Pat was taken ill.

The first day he didn't appear at the store Ruth rushed right to me, desperate, hysterical. She knew he had gone away—that he wouldn't come back—that she had lost him. She demanded why I hadn't made her marry him when she could, and a long time would not hear my suggestion.

"WE'RE MARRIED!"

What I finally urged was that she should quiet down till the next day, when she could inquire at the store and easily find out what had become of Pat.

The next night she didn't come to me, but at 9 the following morning she called me up by telephone, and her voice was a hymn of happiness:

"We're married! We're married!" That was all I could get out of her for a time. But at last she explained:

"I asked at the store, and they said he was sick. I got his address and went there, and he was flat on his back in a little hall bedroom, down and out. I sat right down to take care of him, but the landlady came up and wanted to know if we were married.

"At first I wanted to sass her. The next minute Pat said, 'No, but we're going to be,' and at that I thought, 'Why not now?'

"He was game. I hurried out, got a license and a minister, and we were married last night. And, oh, I'm the happiest girl that ever lived."

Which is the end of the story of Ruth.

CHAPTER XIV.

"THE STRANGE WOMAN."

THIS story that I have to tell is not so much the pitiful chronicle of a girl who strayed from the path, as it is the picture of a woman's heart. I will tell the story just as it happened, and you choose for yourself, but to my mind, Patience Wiggins, and not Marjorie Hart-Wiggins, is the central figure.

These were the two women in the life of Captain Hard Wiggins. He had retired from the sea, in the early years of this century, with more than a comfortable competence. It was the sea that had given him the nickname, "Hard." Patience Wiggins, however, always called him "Captain Wiggins," and Marjorie called him "Uncle Charlie."

Marjorie at twenty was a breath of the sea, and a whiff of the pine woods of Maine, and a touch of the coquetry of the city, all in one. Patience, on the other hand, savored of the chill of Winter; of the hard strength of granite, and there was nothing yielding or agreeable in her—if one saw only with human eyes. Marjorie was a bewitching girl. Patience was a sobering woman. Marjorie's hair was bright and soft. Patience's hair was black, and drawn down so tightly it might have been painted on her head. Marjorie's eyes were blue and laughed, while Patience's eyes were black and had the sparkle of ice over a woodland brook. Marjorie could not keep a smile from her face. Patience only with the greatest difficulty bent her thin lips into the semblance of one. Marjorie in repose was as active as a humming bird. Patience, when not at work, sat in perfect motionlessness in a low rocking chair that never rocked.

GREAT DIFFERENCES

There were as different as two human beings of the same sex and color could be. Marjorie was twenty—Patience forty-six. Marjorie had dreams of a rosy future; Patience had only memories of what might have been. Marjorie was happy. Patience was not.

Yet the strange part of it all was that at twenty Patience had been the gayest, happiest, cheeriest girl in the little New England town where she and Charley Wiggins had been born. She was the sort of girl who, on her own wedding day, when someone called her "Mrs. Wiggins" for the first time, had wrinkled her pretty nose and laughed:

"Mercy! Patience Wiggins! 'Patience' is bad enough—but 'Wiggins'! Ugh! Was there ever such a name?"

At which both she and the assembled company had laughed right merrily. But in these latter days Patience did not jest at her name. Sometimes when she was quite, quite alone her lips moved into a tortured smile as she thought how truly that name had fitted her life.

HER CROSS

It was not that Wiggins was hard to her. He was a man, for one thing, with a wealth of natural loyalty in him, and he had paid Patience every devotion through the twenty-five years of their married life. It was something bigger than her husband which had compacted Patience into the hard-bitten, stern and mirthless woman she was. Three years after their marriage she and Charley had looked forward to an event that would re-make their lives. But the baby lived only a day, and from that day Patience had steadily grown more silent, more sombre, more bowed by a grief that through the years became despair.

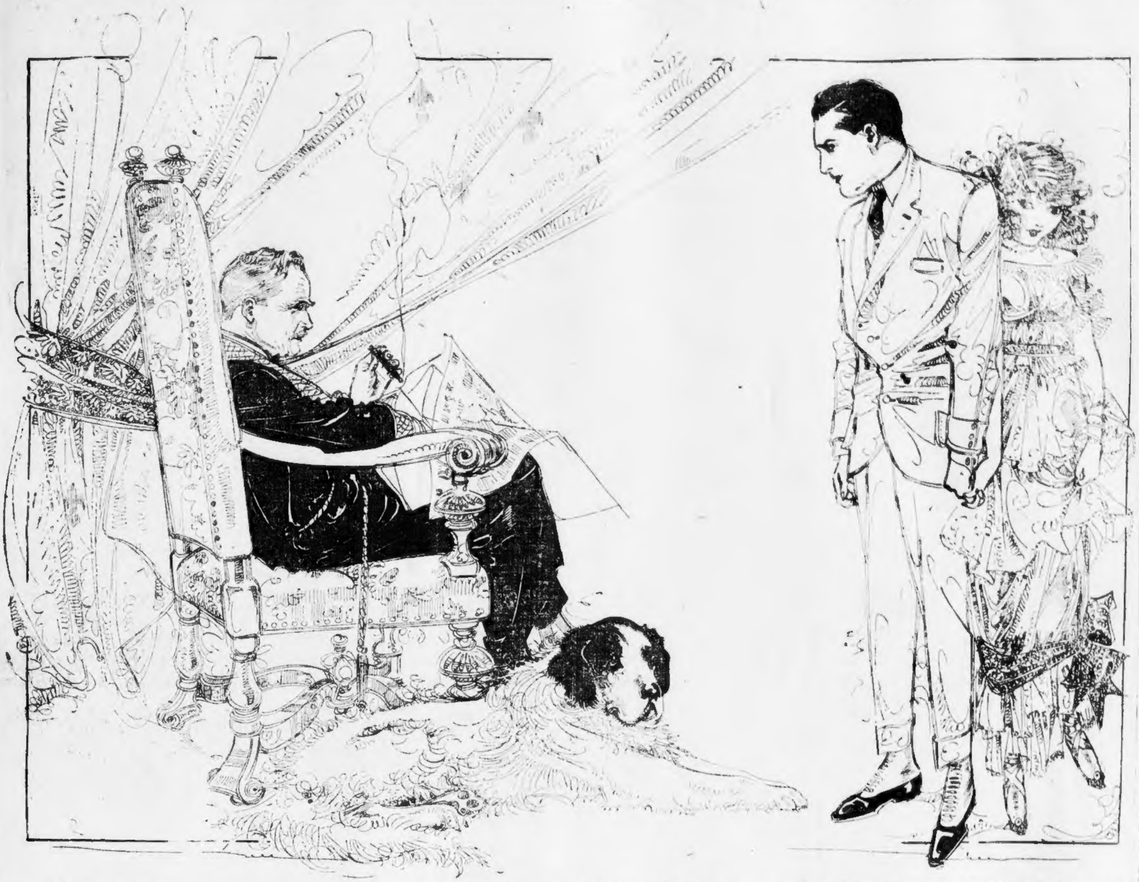
Terrible Minutes

That One When You Ask Dad for Betty

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service.



THAT'S a terrible minute sure!

I wished, when I was little, that I was a boy. Boys could stay out on the prairie later; they could turn a better flip-flop on the minister's fence; they never had to sing "Shine On, Little Sta-a-ah-a-ahr!" at the church Christmas doings and have the organ cease and leave them to go alone. They never had to wash their necks as often, and they could settle things up in a good, soul-satisfying manner when they and the chuckle-headed boy across the aisle didn't agree! I wish that then—just as hard as a little towhead who loved a dog and the whole outdoors and boy conversation and boy books.

But I haven't for a long time. And I don't ever when I remember that I'd have to look some grim-faced man who called the Betty whom I loved his "baby" in the eye—and propose to him! Propose to him that I—SWIPE HER AWAY! So it's good to be a girl—oh, just for that reason alone; kissing your fingers to all the other things that go to make "being a girl" delectable.

For Launcelot Du Lake never puffed out his chest as wide or too as big a breath when he swung his whistling sword for marvelous adventure as a chap does when he buttons up his coat—swallows his sick heart—grips the hand of the little cowardly custard behind him—and asks her father for her. Asking for your first "job" is a terrible episode. But this is a stunner beside it. For you know he doesn't love you—no matter what a safe, comfortable, hustling, clean, square chap you are—because you're a thief. He might as well be blind—he doesn't see your smooth, clean look and straight-gazing eyes—you look just like a porch-climber to him! Anyway, you're afraid you do. And the speech—the speech! Where is it? Last night, in the dark peace of your bed, you said it off—and it was a great talk! It was short—beautifully short—and it was full of sense and persuasion—it put your case and Betty's truthfully and perfectly—and it reminded him that he had once been in your shoes and had LESS than you—reminded him that "up to now" he had liked you—held all the arguments that Love has preached to the world since the tiny beginning of things. It was beautiful. It was honest and serious and short! And where is it now? All you can think of is "She loves me (say yes), and I love her—and I can make her happy!" They all say that!

You almost wish you'd fallen in love with an orphan!

William F. Kirk Tells About:

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HUMAN nature is a very funny thing, sed Pa. Just when a man thinks he has a good grasp on human nature he finds out sumthing new about the institution that throws him way off the track.

I am glad to see you willing to admit that even in awful [illegible] your careful brain is baffled, sed Ma. & what is it just now upset the mental workings of my Socrates this time?

Oh, my old pal Doc Wellington, sed Pa. I don't know whether it is approaching old age that has turned his hed, or the rapid age that we are living in, or what it is, but he has an idee in his hed that he shud have been a poet insted of a doctor.

That is often the case, sed Ma. I have known men & wimmen that were realy splendid in thare line but thay were always wanting to be sumthing else, the same as old Joe Jefferson, the grate actor, thinking that he shud have been a painter insted.

Yes, that is so, sed Pa. You know Doc Wellington is one of the finest doctors that ever struck the big town. He has becum welthy at the practice of medicine, & has saived many thousands of lives, but I never knew till yesterday that he had a big hunch that he can rite poetry. He is going to bring sum of the peeces he rote over to the house tonite, sed Pa, & I suppose I will have to lissen to them. I wish thare was sum way that I cud stall out of it, but I feer thare isent a chanst.

Jest then Pa's frend Doctor Wellington came. He is our family doctor & he never sed anything befoar about riteing poetry, so Pa & Ma & me all [illegible] while he had got set down [illegible] & started to read his poems.

I [illegible] rite a [illegible] because [illegible] lines that he [illegible] rise. This is the [illegible]:

When Babylon was [illegible]
Before it had [illegible]
A prince and princess [illegible]
& pass to [illegible]
There in the [illegible] & dim
He kissed her cheeks and she kissed him.

The prince and princess are no moar,
They were buried in the days of yore.
But say, my sweetheart, doant you think
Of that Babylonian gink
And [illegible] the princess that he kissed
[illegible] in the evening's gentel mist?
If this here theery you'll allow,
We mite as well start kissing now.

I think this is awful cute, sed Ma. Reed us sum moar, Doctor. So the Doctor red:

I cannot think my love is dead and gone.
I seem to see her standing in the dawn.
The sun is shining on her golden hed,
I cannot think my love is gone & ded.
She seems so near, so very near my side,
I cannot think my love has went and died.

The doctor red a lot moar of poems like that, & after he was gone Ma laffed & sed to Pa it was a good thing that Doc Wellington is a better doctor than he is a poet or thare wud be a lot of deths around here.

Do You Know That—

When a Siamese girl attains the age of thirty-five without marrying she is labelled and placed in a privileged class under the special care of the King, who binds himself to find a husband for her. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in any one of the Siamese jails may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the mature maidens. Whether he is already married or not is of no great consequence, for in Siam a man is not restricted to one wife.

Five years ago a bachelors' club was founded in Severance, Colorado, with twenty members, but the club has just been disbanded owing to the fact that all the members are, or are about to be, married, and, according to the rules, are no longer eligible for membership.

There is in the City of Mexico a thieves' market, in which stolen goods are publicly offered for sale. It occupies an entire square. Here may be found everything that is portable, from a telescope to a [illegible], a silk dress, or a pair of [illegible], and the articles are sold at about one-third their actual value. The thieves do not sell the goods openly, for that would be dishonest in the estimation of the Mexicans, but the sellers are those who purchase secretly from the thieves.

A Liverpool [illegible] who [illegible] refused to sell his horse, which had for many years served faithfully both himself and his father. Their Married Life

Warren Takes a Mortgage on a Small House and Helen Sympathizes with the Owner

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"CAN'T see the numbers on these doors," grumbled Warren, as he scanned the houses on both sides of the quiet, dimly-lit street. "Must be in that row on the next block."

"Will we go in?" asked Helen eagerly, for "looking over a mortgage" was for her a new and interesting experience.

"If it looks like a good loan. Can't tell much from the outside. Here we are," pausing before a small three-story house.

There was a light in an upper window, and a faint hall light shone through the diamond-paned glass around the old-fashioned door.

"Why it's frame," exclaimed Helen.

"All these old houses along here are frame. But it's a good deep lot—120 feet. House seems well kept up too. I should say that's good for a three thousand loan. Let's have a look inside."

As Warren went up the steps and rang the bell, Helen tried to picture the person who she thought might open the door. Since Warren was making this loan for a client through a mortgage company they knew nothing of the owner except that the name was Tollman.

Yet Helen felt a profound pity for any one who was so unfortunate as to have to mortgage their home. To her this seemed the last resort of some hopeless indebtedness. She had visions of the door being opened by a sad-faced woman, probably a widow with a couple of children clinging to her skirts.

There was a sound of steps inside and the door opened. It was a woman, but not sad-faced and there were no children. Instead she was a stout, wholesome and very prosperous looking German woman.

Warren stated briefly that he wanted to look over the house in view of taking the mortgage.

A SURPRISE

"Certainly, sir. Come right in. Just wait a moment," as they entered the hall, "and I'll light the gas in the parlor."

To Helen's surprise there was no evidence of poverty or destitution. The "parlor" was furnished with very highly polished imitation mahogany furniture, heavily upholstered in rose damask.

There was an upright piano, a number of pictures in heavy gilt frames, and a bright flowered Smyrna rug. The ceilings had been newly done over, and the walls were papered in a large flowered and gilt design.

"Everything looks well kept up," commented Warren, with a quick appraising glance about. "May I see the back outlook? The diagram showed this to be a good, deep lot."

"Oh, yes, sir," leading them through the back parlor and drawing aside the stiff lace curtain from the window, "this is a 120-foot lot."

"Yes, that's a good back yard," peering out into the darkness. "I believe you have twelve rooms here?"

"Yes, sir; it's three stories and basement."

"Modern plumbing?"

"Yes, sir. I had all new plumbing put in two years ago. Would you like to go upstairs?"

"I'll just take a look at the bathroom."

Helen, feeling that for her to go would seem an unnecessary intrusion, waited in the back parlor while Warren and Mrs. Tollman went up.

Instead of being distressed at this inspection of her home by strangers, Mrs. Tollman seemed to take it quite as a matter of course.

"What taxes do you pay?" asked Warren as they came downstairs.

"I'll just get my tax receipts, sir," and she ran back up the steps.

"Did things look as clean upstairs?" whispered Helen.

"Yes; it's an old house, but well kept up. The plumbing's all new—porcelain tub, good-sized bathroom. It's good for three thousand."

Mrs. Tollman came down now and gave Warren a blue tax receipt.

"Forty-five," he mused, glancing over it. "This is for half a year?"

"Yes, sir; $90 a year. It's assessed for five thousand."

"Now, I suppose you've had this title examined?"

"Well, no sir, I haven't, but I'll have it done. I know it's all right, for my husband bought this house in 1864."

"In 1864!" repeated Warren in astonishment.

"Yes, sir. You see, I was Mr. Tollman's second wife—he was almost twice my age when I married him. That's his picture," nodding proudly toward a crayon portrait of a portly old man with side whiskers.

"Isn't that a uniform?" asked Helen.

A SEA CAPTAIN

"Yes, ma'am; he was a sea captain. He ran for twenty years between here and the West Indies. He was well off, but, of course, his first wife's children came in for their share. This house and the house on Cypress street that I rent was willed to me and my boy."

"Oh, then your son has an interest in this?" observed Warren.

"No, sir; not a penny. Every brick and every board in this and the Cypress street house is MINE!" with unexpected vehemence. "His father's will was that when my boy was twenty-one I should divide half and half. And I've done that! A year ago this February I gave him $7,000 in cash," her lips trembled, "and now he hasn't got a cent!"

"You don't mean he spent it all in that time," murmured Helen sympathetically, for Mrs. Tollman had unconsciously turned to her.

"Yes, ma'am—it's all gone. He's a good boy, but he got in the clutches of a bad woman—and she got every cent of his money."

"That's hard," admitted Warren. "Pity you gave it to him in cash."

"That's the way he wanted it, and I wanted to keep the house. I had three appraisers go over every inch of this and the Cypress street house. They appraised it all at $14,000, and Albert got his $7,000 in cash. I kept roomers eighteen years, ever since his father died, to save that money—now it's all gone. That woman got every cent of it! And she's forty—old enough to be his mother!"

"Is she an actress?" asked Helen impulsively.

"No, ma'am, she's no actress. She's the wife of a dentist here. And now that she's spent all my son's money she's through with him. At least, I've got that to be thankful for."

"Hope you're not mortgaging this to give him more," advised Warren.

"No, indeed, sir," decidedly. "He's had his share. I'll give him a home—but no more money. He's bookkeeper now in a furniture factory getting only fifteen a week. No, I'm taking this mortgage to build some bungalows on a couple of lots I bought three years ago at the shore. The lots ain't bringing in anything, and if I put up a couple of cottages I can rent them for $300 a season."

WARREN INTERESTED

Warren, who was always interested in real estate, began talking to her about shore lots, but Helen kept pondering over the boy and the woman of forty who had gotten his seven thousand dollars.

She looked at his mother, wholesome and hardworking, and thought of all she must have suffered as she saw her boy's fortune slip away from him. She was not a woman to give up easily, for Helen read both strength and character in her firm mouth and chin. But evidently she had been helpless to contend with the fascination that held her son.

Then Helen tried to picture this other woman, this woman of forty. What had been her power? What did she look like? How had she held this boy of twenty-one?

"Well, Mrs. Tollman," as Warren now rose, "you have the title looked up and you can call this closed. You understand about the terms—5½ per cent. for three years."

"Yes, sir, I'll have Mr. Claflin, my lawyer, attend to all that."

"Then he can send the papers around to my office. You've got an attractive little home here, Mrs. Tollman. Some of these old frame houses are better built than the flimsy brick ones they're putting up now."

"Yes, sir, this is a well-built house, and we've tried to keep it up," proudly, as she followed them to the door.

"I hope you'll be successful with your bungalows," murmured Helen.

"Thank you very kindly, ma'am; I hope so," opening the door for them.

As they came down the steps Helen turned to look back. The little frame house had an added interest now that she knew its history. She could see Mrs. Tollman's stout form outlined on the shade as she reached up to turn off the parlor gas.

"This whole row's pretty well kept up," mused Warren, who was surveying the surrounding houses, intent only on the real estate point of view. "Probably all around here own their homes. That loan's all right."

"Oh, don't you like her?" for Helen saw only the human side. "Couldn't you see that she was really a very fine woman?"

"Pretty good business woman, too. She'll do well with those shore lots."

"But think of her working all those years to save that money and then to have that boy throw it away!"

Warren shrugged his shoulders. "Well, she's sensible enough to take it philosophically. The boy's had his share, and he's spent it."

"Did you notice the way she said 'Every brick and every board in this house is MINE'? I can imagine how she felt. Dear, if she shouldn't be able to pay the interest you'd make it easy for her, wouldn't you? Oh, I'd love to help a woman like that."

"Huh, there's no sentiment about mortgages. You pay or you're foreclosed. But she'll keep up her payments all right. Those thrifty Germans make mighty good business women. I'd like some more loans as good. She'll not get behind. Now, don't you begin to worry about HER!"

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks grew stronger during the morning, and at the close ranged about ⅛ higher in New York, where share transactions totalled about 138,000. Business was more active in the second hour, when the market ruled higher than during the first.

In Boston at the opening New Haven declined three points, because of the adverse decision of the Supreme Court as to its proposed $67,000,000 bond issue. But it rallied to 73⅞ at the close, ending at a loss of ⅝. Its low for the day was 72½. Boston & Maine opened a point lower, at 48½, and closed at 52, up 2½ from Friday's closing. American Telephone made a small gain here. Coppers were dull.

In New York at the close gains included Canadian Pacific 1⅛, Southern Pacific ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio 1¼, Reading ⅜, American Telephone ⅛ and Steel ⅛. Amalgamated was unchanged and New Haven off ⅝.

The United States Steel Corporation today reported unfilled tonnage on its books on December 31, 1913, amounting to 4,282,108 tons, against 4,396,347 unfilled tons on November 30, 1913, and 7,932,164 on December 31, 1912.

The New York bank statement was as follows:

Average statement—Excess cash reserve $22,245,650; increase, $11,929,500. Loans, increase $4,818,000. Specie increase $15,277,000. Legal tenders, increase $7,292,000. Net deposits, increase $26,530,000. Circulation, increase $155,000. Actual statement—Loans, increase $5,491,000. Specie, increase $22,714,000. Legal tenders, increase $3,277,000. Net deposits, increase $31,177,000. Reserve, increase $19,9[illegible].

EARLY PRICES WERE LOWER.

In New York railroads averaged lower at the start and by the end of the first hour there was a better tone. Among first hour gains were Canadian Pacific, 1; Southern Pacific, ⅛; Missouri Pacific, ¼; Union Pacific, ¼; Baltimore & Ohio, ½-1½; Reading, ½; Lehigh Valley ⅝; American Telephone, ¼; American Can, ⅛, and American Smelting, ⅜. New Haven was off 1¼ and Amalgamated ¼.

There was a three-point break in New Haven in New York when that market opened, and but within fifteen minutes it had recovered two-thirds of the loss.

Trading was brisk at the opening and many of the active shares were lower, but after half an hour's trading they ranged above Friday's final. Among specialties Texas Company attracted the most attention, making a jump of 2⅜ to 138⅞. Reading was in demand. Among stocks to decline early were Western Union, Steel common, Amalgamated, American Can, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie and Missouri Pacific.

Southern Pacific opened unchanged but Union Pacific sustained a fractional decline. American Telephone, Norfolk & Western and New York Central gained fractionally. Americans were weak in London on profit taking.

WHAT CORPORATIONS OWE.

The New York American says that business corporations in this country face $1,302,520,000 maturing debts during 1914, 1915 and 1916.

This year alone $757,940,000 of obligations fall due, of which the railroads will have to meet $651,182,000—by far the greatest burden that has ever confronted them at the opening of any year. This is largely the aftermath of the enormous issues of short term notes during the last few years.

Next year the maturities already scheduled foot up to $393,116,000, of which the railroads contribute all but $100,000,000.

For 1916 there is within sight $151,471,000, and of course this total will be swelled by all the two-year notes which may be issued during 1914 and the one-year obligations put out in 1915.

WAR AGAINST SUGAR TRUST?

There is belief in Washington that the administration is going to resume its war upon the American Sugar Refining Company, often called the "Sugar Trust," and which, so far as the number of stockholders is concerned, is a New England institution. There had been hopes that the corporation would come to terms with the Department of Justice on the reorganization question and that a dissolution suit would be avoided. Now it is said, Unless the so-called "Trust" agrees to meet demands for a reorganization, the pending suit to dissolve it under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act will be pressed with vigor by Attorney-General McReynolds.

The hope of officials that recent conferences between Mr. McReynolds and Snowden Marshall, United States District Attorney, would result in a peaceful settlement of the suit filed more than three years ago was shattered when word came that negotiations had failed.

Department officials decline to discuss the case, and the exact points which failed of adjustment have not been made public.

NEW ANTI-TRUST LAW.

According to Representative Carlin of the House Judiciary Committee, which is to draft the administration measure to curb trusts, legislation which will supplement the Sherman act is likely to contain a provision that guilt shall be personal and have a penal clause for the punishment of corporation officials who infract it.

All restraint of trade will be declared illegal, it is said, and courts will be denied the right to apply the "rule of reason" as to what constitutes it. Interlocking directorates between banks, railroads and industrial concerns will be prohibited. Drastic provisions will be written against bankers serving as railroad directors and railroad directors serving as bank directors; against directors in an industrial concern from serving as directors in another industrial concern which may compete in any way.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

It is said that copper could be bought of small dealers in New York yesterday as low as 14⅛ cents a pound.

For the week ended Thursday copper exports totalled 12,639 tons against 6,147 in the corresponding 1913 period. It is estimated that more than 50,000 tons will be exported this month.

Regarding the business done by the United States Steel Corporation for the last 1913 quarter, it was stated in New York this morning: "Wall Street statisticians who have followed the course of business closely reckon that the showing will be between $27,000,000 and $[illegible], while other observers of the market go lower than these totals."

Arrest Detectives as Moyer Sequel

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Two private detectives, William Martin and Charles Smith, were arrested here today in connection with matters developing from the recent deportation of Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, from the Michigan copper country. The arrests were based on charges that the men posed as private detectives without being licensed and had bought affidavits for Moyer in which it was alleged that mine owners had hired New York "gunmen" to war on the strikers.

BANKERS ARE UNITED IN PLEA FOR 'REGIONAL'

that does not give one to New England."

One of the final speakers today was [illegible] Moody Boynton of bicycle railway fame.

PUSH BOSTON CLAIM.

Though scores of bankers and business men were at yesterday's hearing to voice their demand for a bank here, there were many more present today to lend the weight of their voice and presence to the Boston argument.

One of the leading speakers was Gordon Abbott, chairman of directors of the Old Colony Trust Company.

"If the new law is to be carried out in the spirit in which it was passed," declared Mr. Abbott, "it is practically impossible to divide the country into regions without making New England one of them."

Mr. Abbott added:

"There should be three or four banks in the Northeastern section of the country—if there is to be a parity among them. I suggest banks in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. All New England should be in the Boston district."

EQUALLY WELL SERVED.

W. H. Whiting commented that Connecticut, whether in the New York or Boston district, would have a branch bank and would be equally well served in any case.

George W. R. Harriman of an engineering firm submitted to the two secretaries a portfolio of maps and charts showing the financial and industrial resources of various sections of the United States.

The New England section was shown in great detail. The charts made plain the importance of Boston as a financial centre.

Farm Training for Families Is Urged

Complying with an order of the Legislature, the State Board of Education has submitted a report of an investigation as to the advisability of giving agricultural instructions to families. The report is based upon an investigation of 500 families in the North and West Ends of Boston, and declares it is desirable for Massachusetts to make possible the carrying out of experiments in giving agricultural instruction to families even to the extent of providing the land and homes for temporary occupancy for the purpose.

TRUST CURBING LEGISLATION TO JAIL OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Tentative plans of the administration anti-trust legislation to supplement the Sherman anti-trust law have been made known through Representative Carlin of Virginia, a member of the judiciary committee.

Provision is to be made that guilt of violation of the Sherman law shall be personal with a penal clause for the punishment of officers of corporations found guilty.

Competition in business is to be restored through prohibition, under drastic penal penalties, against the fixing of sales prices by managers of industrial concerns or by the manufacturers themselves at "social dinners," such as given by the executive head of the Steel Corporation to steel magnates.

All restraint of trade will be declared illegal, and courts will be denied the right to apply the "rule of reason" as to what constitutes unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman law.

Interlocking directorates between banks, railroads and industrial concerns will be prohibited. Drastic provisions will be written against bankers serving as railroad directors and railroad directors serving as bank directors; against directors in an industrial concern from serving as directors in another industrial concern which may compete in any way.

Strengthening of the "commodity clause" of the Hepburn act will prohibit common carriers from ownership or control of manufacturing establishments and mining property, the product of which goes into interstate commerce.

Authority is to be vested in the Secretary of Commerce to demand full reports from concerns engaged in interstate commerce with the right to make public details of the business of such concerns where the government has reason to believe there is violation of the law against monopoly or in restraint of trade.

Restraint and regulations of the license rights growing out of patent monopolies is provided for.

Permit B. & M. to Increase Rates

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 10.—The Public Service Commission of New Hampshire has made public a report and order granting the Boston & Maine the right to increase its freight rates.

"In view of all the evidence before us, we are convinced that the interest of the State requires the establishment of a maximum class rate schedule, and that class rates be permitted to be raised so far as they may be in conformity therewith.

"Indeed, unless increases in revenue are permitted, it would seem inevitable that bankruptcy must follow. Such a result would be a calamity to New Hampshire in general, just as truly as to the security holders of the Boston & Maine and its subsidiary lines. It should be prevented if that can be done without injustice to the public.

"A readjustment of class rates, with a reasonable increase in revenue, will accordingly be allowed as a first step. Commodity rates will be next revised, and new maximum rates established in harmony with the new class rates. Some revision will be made in passenger rates, and in rates for switching and other special service."

New Haven Fights to Retain Trolleys

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The control of the entire trolley system of New England was discussed with Attorney-General McReynolds today by Chairman Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Dr. Hadley, president of the Yale corporation and a director in the New Haven system, and Lucius S. Storrs, president of the Connecticut Company.

That the New Haven will make exceptional efforts to retain control of many of its trolley subsidiaries is certain. Although it has virtually turned over control of the Rhode Island Company, it is said to be disinclined to part with the Connecticut Company. It is possible that the department may agree to allow the New Haven road to hold some of its lines.

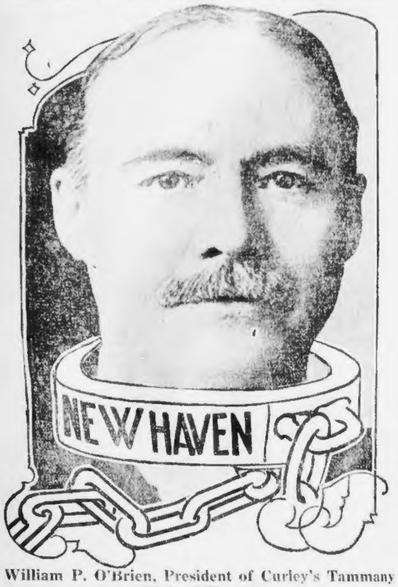
The President of Curley's Tammany Club Wears the New Haven Collar



William P. O'Brien, President of Curley's Tammany Club of Ward 17.

William P. O'Brien is President of Curley's creature, the "Tammany Club" of Ward 17.

O'Brien, in the last Legislature, voted to give the New Haven railroad trust the street railways in more than half of the State.

In voting for the New Haven he violated his party platform and disregarded the warnings of the Democratic Governor, the Railroad Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Public Franchise League.

Governor Walsh denounced this man's vote as the highest form of political treason. Mayor Fitzgerald also denounced it.

Did Mr. Curley ever denounce it?

Did he remove this man from his office in Curley's club? NO.

When Congress had before it the question of investigating the deal between the New Haven railroad and the Grand Trunk, by which Boston was deprived of the benefit of an additional railroad, Mr. CURLEY DODGED.

Ex-Congressman Michael J. McEttrick, who has a perfect public record for twenty years, says that he was opposed by Curley's Tammany organization because he voted AGAINST the New Haven railroad.

John J. Gartland has joined Mr. Curley. Mr. Gartland is among those who received money from the New Haven last year, and whom the Railroad Commission is now investigating.

Think these facts over and answer this question: IS CURLEY FREE FROM NEW HAVEN RAILROAD INFLUENCE, OR IS HE ITS TOOL?

Let Every Man Vote Next Tuesday and Boston's Fair Fame Will Be Secure

What do the citizens of Boston think of the campaign methods of a candidate whose followers, wearing his button, stone the conveyances of Mr. Kenny and carry violence and disorder into Mr. Kenny's rallies? This lawlessness is the nightly orgy of the same candidate who, while Congressman, recently denounced men in Ward 9 and in South Boston as "DOORMAT THIEVES, SECOND-STORY WORKERS AND MILK-CAN ROBBERS."

Do the people of Boston want to make such a man their chief magistrate? Is there no pride in a great history and in the great men who have made Boston famous throughout the world? It is a far cry from John Adams and John Hancock, John Boyle O'Reilly and James Jeffrey Roche, Theodore Parker and Charles Sumner, Patrick A. Collins, Patrick Donahoe, Wendell Phillips, Hugh O'Brien and Thomas J. Gargan to the boss of the Tammany Club of Ward 17.

Our poets, writers, orators and public men have given Boston a fair fame for several generations. Shall our careless citizens throw the fame away and proclaim us a "Gang City"?

Let every man vote and the danger will pass.

Don't Shut in Disease Germs

Two months of cold weather are ahead. Possibly three. By keeping the windows closed you can shut out the cold. You can and will also shut in disease germs. Incidentally, by breathing the polluted air of closed rooms you will shut the germs in your systems. Then you will first get colds and afterward pneumonia. The germs of all diseases, measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria, that the children bring home from the school and the street, will take up their abode in your closed apartment, and by and by they will fall to work.

Keep the house ventilated, and you will keep the family's lungs ventilated. The germs will be there just the same, but they will not stay to work.

Keep the house warm, but keep it ventilated. When the radiator is turned on, open the windows and the bad air will go out and the fresh air will come in. When you go to bed use plenty of blankets and open the window wide. Sometimes it is uncomfortable to rise feeling chilly, but it is much better and much safer than to rise with fever hammering at your pulses and contagion surging through your blood.

Stars and Stripes

Ungrateful burglars have stolen the plays of the dramatic author who made them famous.

Man who kissed Yonkers girl fined $1 a kiss. Can't kick about the high cost of kissing in Yonkers.

The contented man doesn't want to change places with anybody; least of all with a Spaniard in Mexico.

American takes moving pictures at the bottom of the crater of Vesuvius. About one more step to have Lucifer posing.

Paris men are dyeing their hair blue and Paris women are wearing a Mona Lisa smile. One may be the result of the other.

The Filipinos must be bitterly disappointed in Francis Burton Harrison. He led them to expect they would be fighting Japan to preserve their independence before the first of the year.

OH YOU WONDERFUL MAN-
I'LL ADMIT IT-
I LOVE THIS PART OF THE MUSIC WHEN THE DIP COMES
THAT'S MY DISH- THE DIP- I MIGHT SAY THAT I'M THE DIPPING KID
WOOPS MY DEAR!! I GUESS THE VIOLINIST BROKE A STRING
Y-E-S-S
Z-Z-ZIP!!
AN BUTTON
WHY HE'S LOST HIS MIND
HEY!! HARRY THROW ME A ROPE

Introspection

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

SOMETIMES I meet a stranger in my way—
My other self—
A girl whose level eyes look into mine,
Who smiles and bids me cross the border line
Into her land, and when I fain would stay,
I lose her, for she quickly slips away—
My other self.

A girl who is a part of me, and yet
My other self.
Is quite a stranger in another land,
I fear her, for I cannot understand
The mystery in her eyes nor quite forget
This stranger part of me that I have met—
My other self.

In-Shoots

The glitter of gold gives the countenance of a plain girl a most pleasing appearance.

It is not so bad to have a skeleton in your closet if it does not persist in dancing the tango at unexpected moments.

When witnesses in a lawsuit are honest they seldom agree as to details of the case.

The reformer who has nothing of consequence to reform is something of a nuisance.

The demure looking woman is liable to have the most exciting history of all.

It is seldom that a man can look with admiration upon an old photograph of himself.

Experience also teaches us a lot of things that are of no particular use.

Upon the whole it is better to be proud of your children than of your ancestors.

The simple life would be all right if a fellow could select his own brand of simplicity.

The individual who is constantly suspicious that someone will get his job advertises himself as a lightweight.

As a rule only a few of us can share the satisfaction of the self satisfied man.

The toboggan to ruin is always well greased.

Science Tells Us a Few More Things Which We All Ought to Know

New things are being discovered every day.

Perhaps a new airship is invented, a new wireless instrument is devised, a new cure for a hitherto uncurable affliction is discovered.

Or perhaps it is merely that umbrellas are dangerous disease carriers, that a few simple precautions will make our teeth last longer or that a little neglect accounts for the fact that the human race is becoming bald-headed.

In the Boston Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow, and every Sunday, are two pages devoted to new discoveries and scientific announcements of importance to every one.

How children may save their teeth from decay by simple precautions and care.
Umbrellas are dangerous carriers of disease and sickness.
How to get the best out of yourself by treating your body like an engine and caring for it accordingly.
Why there are fewer rickety babies.
Why thirty is woman's fatal age.
How to make your automobile carry six comfortably instead of four.
Foolish little habits that expose us to germs.
How to tell who will make the best employe.
Why you should eat fruit, but not with your meals.
How wrong living makes your arteries burst.

and many more things you'll find interesting.

Also in the Magazine Section you will find these big exclusive features:

The Search for Relics of St. Peter and St. Paul:

How it is hoped that an exploration of the vaults of St. Clement's, the most ancient church in Rome, may bring to light many remarkable mementoes of these two apostles.

The Real Secret Behind the "Poison Needle" Cases:

Professor Rice of Columbia University explains why there have been no real "poison needle" assaults and reveals a curious scientific reason for so many women imagining that they have been attacked in this way.

What We Think of the "Old Folks":

Anna Held's daughter and Oscar Hammerstein's granddaughter make very frank criticisms of Mother Anna and Grandpa Oscar and their old-fashioned ways.

Evelyn Thaw's Story of the Repudiation of Her Baby by the Thaws:

The real secret of the repudiation. She will tell, too, why she was forced to return to the stage.

What Is the Best Song to Put Baby to Sleep?

Science discovers that a child's brain shows just what lullabies will have the most soothing effect on him.

"The Holy Night" Solemnly Played by Villagers:

As at Oberammergau the men, women and children of this little Connecticut town unite, regardless of creed, to enact scenes from the Saviour's life at their annual nativity performance.
